U. S. Terms 3278 Aliens Undesirable, Clark Says

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Attorney General Clark informed Congress yesterday that more than 3000 undesirable aliens are at large in the United States, of whom 833 were "suspected subversive aliens."

Clark asked the House Judiciary Committee to approve legislation now before it which would enable the Justice Department to deport these aliens. He explained they were not now deportable because countries to which they could be sent under existing law would not receive them.

In another action the Justice Department asked the Supreme Court to dismiss the appeal by Gerhart Eisler from a contempt of Congress conviction now before it. The court was informed that Eisler was a fugitive from justice, that his bond had been forfeited and that to continue consideration of his appeal would place him in the position of "declaring the terms upon which he is willing to surrender."

Eisler is being held in England after being forcibly taken from the Polish liner Batory on which he stowed away and escaped fr m New York. He had been convicted not only on the contempt charge but also on a charge of perjury in obtaining a passport by swearing he was not a Communist. Bail totaling $23,500 in the two cases has been declared forfeit.

In a footnote to its memorandum to the court the Justice Department apparently took cognizance of expressed British determination not to extradite Eisler in a "political" case. The footnote points out that the Austrian-born Communist is not subject to extradition in the contempt case.

Clark's letter to the House Judiciary Committee was in support of legislation which would prevent a repetition of the Eisler episode by authorizing him to hold undesirable aliens in jail without bail. The measure would have prevented Eisler's escape had it been in force, Clark said.

"This department," he wrote, "would have had authority to hold the alien (Eisler) in detention and there is no doubt that the department would have done so."

Altogether, Clark said, there are unenforceable deportation warrants extant against 3278 undesirable aliens, of whom 2147 were nationals of Iron Curtain countries. Of these latter, he added, 1180 are Russians.

Of the total, Clark said, 1293 warrants were based on criminal or immorality charges and 112 related to subversion. "In addition, he said, 416 cases are pending and there are approximately 833 "suspected subversive aliens" being investi-

U. S. Case Seen Weakened by New Eisler Warrant

London, May 20 (U.P.).—Legal experts believed today that the United States may have weakened its case for extradition of Gerhart Eisler by revising its warrant for his arrest.

The original warrant sought Eisler's return to the United States on a charge of perjury. The revised warrant accused him of "making false statements."

Legal circles here said perjury is a black-and-white issue and could be established far easier than a question of false statement on which differences of opinion, rather than fact, would enter.

Security Suspect to Testify Before McMahon Committee

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) last night announced that the Joint Atomic Energy Committee will meet Monday afternoon to hear Dr. Isador S. Edelman of Brooklyn in connection with the Atomic Energy Commission's fellowship program.

Edelman's name was brought into a hearing of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee yesterday under questioning of AEC Chairman David E. Lilienthal by Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.).

Lilienthal said that Edelman, who is drawing a $3750 AEC fellowship, was denied clearance by the commission for work in connection with a classified project because of security considerations.

The AEC told the appropriations group that Edelman denied he was a Communist but that FBI evidence raised serious doubts on security grounds.

After being denied clearance for work where he came into contact with persons having classified information, Edelman, Lilienthal said, was given a fellowship for advanced medical studies at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston.

Dr. Shields Warren, the Commission's director of biology and medicine, testified that the fellowship was granted Edelman in full knowledge of the "derogatory" information against him because he was considered "an outstanding" medical researcher.

The fellowship committee, Dr. Warren said, felt that Edelman

"ought to have the opportunity to contribute his potential knowledge in a way that would in no sense be harmful to the atomic program."

Under the new policy which the National Research Council is expected to follow, Warren indicated the fellowship might be withdrawn if the "derogatory" information is proved correct.

House Action On Military Pay Delayed

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Opponents of the military pay bill temporarily blocked Hou e action on the Administration-backed measure again yesterday.

Charges that the proposed new salary scales favor the "top brass" over enlisted men were repeatedly thrown at sponsors during the day-long, sometimes angry debate on the legislation.

Average Boost of 14 Per Cent

The bill would provide an average increase of 14 per cent for men in uniform. Biggest boosts—up to 50 per cent—go to top-ranking commissioned and non-commissioned officers. The lowest-ranking privates would get no raise.

Members of the House Armed Services Committee, which approved the bill 28 to 0, say this is because the latters' pay was increased several times in recent years in an effort to encourage volunteers and that the measure seeks to base compensation on the responsibility exercised and skill acquired.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) charged the economy-minded opponents of the bill are attacking the "high brass" simply as a smoke screen. Its defeat, he said, would deny higher rates to trained sergeants and other noncoms.

Sutton Leads Attack

If responsible officers are not better paid, said the Georgian, the best men will drop out and "you'll have incompetent, mediocre men guarding the destiny of the country."

Representative Pat Sutton, a freshman Democrat from Tennessee, led the attack on the bill. The much-decorated Congressman who arose from apprentice seaman to lieutenant (junior grade) challenged statements that generals and admirals are underpaid.

"Let's look and see just what the general does get. His base pay is just the beginning. It doesn't consider the car and chauffeur he has, the mansion of a home, the servants and the cook,

Dutra Praises Press Stand For Principles

President Eurico Gaspar Dutra of Brazil yesterday praised the American press for an "unrelenting attitude in behalf of the principles of democracy and peace."

He told a luncheon meeting of the National Press Club that American newspapers, magazines, specialized periodicals and "mighty news agencies" are "one of the strongest forces for construction and for order in the modern world."

The Brazilian leader, here on an official state visit, took time off from a whirl of appearances yesterday morning to do some sightseeing.

He visited the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery and George Washington's home at Mount Vernon, Va., among other noted places of interest.

At the Press Club, he said the American press has played a prominent role in furthering good relations between Brazil and the United States.

Herbert Moses, president of the Brazilian Press Association and a member of Dutra's party, told the Press Club that his nation would stand by the United States in a hot or cold war.

He said Brazil has "proudly" watched and backed United States moves to bring about world peace, and "if peace can't be won we are prepared to face that other awful alternative, as we did last time, standing at your side."

Dutra leaves today for New York after a luncheon in his honor given by the Council of American States.

Britain Orders Shelters Retained

London, May 20 (A.P.).—Britain's remaining air raid shelters will stay put for the time being, Home Secretary Chuter Ede ruled today.

Some, standing in the middle of streets, already have been demolished. But Chuter Ede told municipal authorities a year ago not to tear down any more of them.

Conservative MP Martin Lindsay asked Chuter Ede to allow removal of shelters still standing on private property and in back yards.

"I do not feel justified in authorizing the removal of shelters except where necessary in the public interest," Chuter Ede said.

New Hearing Tests Urged To Aid Unresponsive Youth

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Newly developed hearing tests may save untold numbers of unresponsive children from commitment to homes for feeble-minded, it was reported here yesterday.

Already, more than 100 youngsters have been spared such a fate after tests showed their only impairment was a hearing loss. All had previously been diagnosed as feeble-minded.

Dr. William G. Hardy, audiologist at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, reported his findings at an opening day session of the Middle Atlantic Zone Conference of the American Hearing Society, at Hotel Washington.

Another speaker, Dr. T. Frasier Williams, Arlington, Va., otolaryngologist, told of the increasing use of a radioactive gas (radon) in improving hearing by radiation removal of adenoidal tissue about the eustachian tubes.

Dr. Hardy, director of the hearing and speech center at Hopkins, said he strongly recommends that all children slated for institutions for the feeble-minded be given the "objective" hearing tests before such commitment.

The new hearing test, based on involuntary responses of the subjects being tested, was first described here early this year at a meeting of the Washington Hearing Society. Its chief advantage is that it can be used to test children too young to cooperate in present hearing tests.

Cut Budget Yourself, Truman Told

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A Senate Democrat yesterday invited the President to trim his own budget as a bipartisan economy bloc met its fourth straight setback in the Senate.

The $751,440,690 civil functions bill, weighted with "pet" projects for rivers and harbors and flood control, was passed unscathed despite three separate attempts to slash it.

The invitation to Mr. Truman to show Congress how to cut came from Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), chairman of the Senate Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments.

McClellan called a meeting of his committee for Monday to consider the resolution introduced last Monday by Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), directing the President to make an over-all 5 per cent cut in total appropriations, to save 2½ billions and avoid a deficit.

Appeals to President

McClellan said he thought the Tydings resolution might be used as a "base" to work out an economy formula. He appealed to Mr. Truman to "take the ball."

"The President should send us a message pointing out where cuts can be made," said McClellan. "It is not too late to make them. None of the regular appropriation bills has reached the White House. They can even be cut in conference."

A liberal freshman Democrat—Senator Paul Douglas (Ill.)—meanwhile grabbed the economy issue in the Senate and faced down the frowns of his senior colleagues to propose a 40 per cent "slice" in local project "fat."

Douglas was defeated, 59 to 15, on a tabling motion by Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.), with some of the Senate's most vocal economy advocates voting to sidetrack it.

Republicans then let loose a battery of motions to recommit the bill for lesser cuts—with no better luck.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) joined Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) in an effort to cut the amount 10 per cent. This was rejected 48 to 29.

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) proposed a 5 per cent reduction—the same motion Republicans have fired unsuccessfully at three other appropriation bills. This, too, was defeated, 44 to 33.

These were relatively close margins compared with the cold shoulder Douglas got on his proposal to slash the bill 300 million dollars. Douglas heard himself called everything from a "reactionary" to "impolite." In the end only 1 Democrat (Johnson of Colorado) and 13 Republicans voted with him.

What roused the ire of Senate Appropriations Chairman Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) was Douglas' charge that the bill was loaded with enough local project "fat" to insure passage.

In earlier days, Douglas said, the bill was frankly named a rivers and harbors bill and irreverently referred to as "the pork barrel."

"It was commonly believed that sufficient fat chunks of appropriations were passed around among the various districts and States to insure its passage."

A quarter century ago he said the bill was named "the civil functions of the Department of the Army bill."

800 Watch Jet Fall Into Bay, Killing Pilot

More than 800 spectators watched in horror as a Marine pilot plunged to his death in a jet fighter plane during an air show yesterday at the Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent, Md.

Capt. Alvin J. Jensen, 28, Marine flying ace who destroyed more than 30 Jap planes in the Pacific, was killed when a wing of his plane tore loose and the craft smashed into the waters of Chesapeake Bay at 500 miles per hour.

His wife, Louise, was among those who witnessed the sudden tragedy.

The accident happened shortly after 2 p. m. The spectators were watching from the shore as Jensen took off in a Banshee, or F2H, which the Navy considers the most efficient fighter plane yet developed by this country.

Within seven minutes, he had taken the plane to an altitude of about 40,000 feet. Then he started a dive, at a 30-degree angle, to make a strafing run over a target anchored in the bay.

The plane was no more than 200 or 300 feet from the water when the veteran pilot apparently started to pull it out of the dive.

Then the left wing ripped loose. The plane bounced from the water several times and sank in about 30 feet of water.

"It all happened in a second," said one observer. "The pilot didn't have a chance to get clear of the plane."

Crash boats were at the scene within five minutes but there was nothing they could do.

Choppy waters prevented rescue workers from bringing Jensen's body and the plane to the surface.

Officials said divers will be sent down today to locate the wreckage and it will be hoisted by a boat-borne derrick.

The air show staged by the Naval Air Station at Patuxent featured a general display of the latest models of Naval aircraft.

But the Navy's proudest display was the Banshee jet fighter which carried Jensen to his death. This is the same plane which the Navy has told National Defense Secretary Johnson and Congress could overpower in combat the B-36

Gambling Case Judge Rules

6 Months 'Too Long' to Issue Warrant After Alleged Crime

By Benjamin C. Bradlee
Post Reporter

District Court Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut said yesterday that six months between the date of an alleged gambling offense and the issuance of a search warrant was "too long" a lapse of time.

He made the comment during argument on motions to quash the search warrant and suppress the evidence seized thereunder in the case of Frederick C. Whiteoak, 31, 1504 Oates st. ne., one of the 36 men indicted in April by the special gambling grand jury.

Whiteoak was arrested and his premises searched on March 25, on the basis of an affidavit issued on that day and charging that Whiteoak promoted a numbers lottery in September, 1948.

In court yesterday, the Government admitted the search warrant "may have been no good," but contended the seizure of $40 in cash plus horse race and numbers slips was legal. Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz argued that a place could be searched incidental to an arrest even if a search warrant was invalid. The Whiteoak arrest warrant was not questioned.

Judge Schweinhaut took under advisement both motions in the Whiteoak case. He also took under advisement motions to suppress evidence in the three cases against another indicted gambler, Atillio Acalotti.

Charles E. Ford represented Acalotti and Whiteoak, both circulation men for the Washington Times-Herald.

Meanwhile, Nola Andrews, in whose apartment Acalotti was arrested, became the first person to lose her telephone, over a protest, on the grounds it was being used in violation of District gambling laws.

John M. Howard, general commercial manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., revealed yesterday that her telephone had been disconnected "pursuant to a court order." United States Attorney George Morris Fay is seeking to remove more than 300 telephones in an effort to curtail gambling. Removal of more than 200 has been delayed pending court decisions.

In the Acalotti case, the Government had a warrant to arrest Acalotti at 908 14th st. nw., and search those premises on March 25. He was arrested at 1223 12th st. nw., in the Andrews apartment, which was searched by arresting officers. Later the 14th st. address also was searched.

Ford maintained the Government had no right to search the 14th st. address. The Government again

Ford Strike Talks Verge On Collapse

Detroit, May 20 (A.P.).—Peace talks between the Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers (CIO) in the 16-day-old Ford strike stood on the verge of collapse today.

Threatening the talks on the very day the Federal Government put a mediator on the scene was a heated dispute over starting time for negotiations on a new union contract to replace the one that expires next July 15.

The company, with 102,000 production workers idle, refused to agree to contract talks during the strike, specifically not before June 1.

The union demanded that Ford agree to begin contract talks by next Monday. Otherwise, UAW President Walter Reuther threatened to pull the union negotiating team out of the strike talks.

Charges Threatened

Further, Reuther declared in a statement that the union would file unfair labor practice charges against Ford if the company doesn't open contract discussions by Monday.

In the liveliest session since direct peace negotiations opened 10 days ago, each side pointed the blame for possible break-off of peace relations at the other.

John S. Bugas, Ford vice president, declared that if the strike talks are broken off "it will be strictly the union's responsibility."

Reuther replied that responsibility for such a threatened end to the peace talks "rests squarely on the shoulders of the company."

Arthur C. Viat, federal mediator who entered the negotiations today for the first time, said, "we are doing our best to keep the parties together. It's tough."

It was apparent that today's negotiations between Ford and the union drifted away from the strike dispute onto the subject of the contract reopening.

UAW to Seek Pensions

The UAW will seek $100-a-month pensions, medical and hospital insurance as well as a wage increase.

The union originally asked that the company agree to start contract talks on May 16, but Ford declined to enter negotiations on the contract as long as the parties are engaged in direct talks aimed at settlement of the current strike.

Bugas said the company is obligated under the law only to agree to reopen the contract "a reasonable time before it expires."

He contended that a June 1 opening would allow six weeks before the July 15 expiration.

He said that because the strike had completely disrupted operations in Ford's industrial relations division, the company "simply is not prepared to talk on our contract changes prior to June 1."

Reuther insisted that contract talks be opened by Monday, separately and distinctly from the continuing negotiations on the strike.

"Thousands of Ford workers not involved in the strike have an equity in the contract negotiations," Reuther said.

Mexican Panic Sends Peso Down

Mexico City, Mexico, May 20 (U.P.).—Sudden panic in the foreign exchange market today sent the Mexican peso plummeting 42 points and forced banks to suspend sales of dollar exchange.

After a week of comparative stability, the peso went down to 8.40 to the dollar in a jittery market and operations were halted.

Bankers said they saw no chance of improvement or resumption of dollar sales until they received new dollar reserves which are expected soon.

They blamed the panic partly on a threat of a nation-wide oil workers' strike and partly on yesterday's report in the Journal of Commerce that the reserve requirements of the Bank of Mexico were to be lowered.

Recreation Board to Run Parks If It Ends Segregation Policy

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Interior Department will turn over operation of all its local park areas to the District Recreation Board if the board will abolish its present segregation policy at next month's meeting.

This was announced last night by Assistant Secretary of the Interior C. Girard Davidson, speaking at a forum conducted by the Inter-Church Fellowship and All Souls Unitarian Church.

He said the only park areas whose operation should remain with Interior were Rock Creek Park, the Mall, the Ellipse and other similar strictly national areas.

"We want the Recreation Board to expand its recreation activities in the park and to take over such facilities as golf courses and swimming pools, which are now operated by private concessionaires through contracts with this department," Davidson said.

But Davidson said his department did not intend "to turn them over for operation until the segregation policy has been abolished."

The seven-member Recreation Board will vote on abolishing segregation at its June 14 meeting.

Davidson praised the recent report on segregation in public meeting places made by Harry S. Wender, chairman of the recreation unit. Wender was present at last night's meeting at which several members of the audience, however, said the report had been overpraised.

City's Lines Paralyzed By Walkout

Berlin, Saturday, May 21 (A.P.)—West Berlin railway workers started a brawling strike against their Russian bosses at one minute past midnight, paralyzing vital rail traffic from western Germany and stalling elevated passenger trains wherever they stood.

Soviet-controlled railway police and strikers battled with fists and stones in the American-occupied Templehof district in the early morning hours. West zone police broke up fist fighting between groups of strikers and Communist youths at an elevated railway station in midtown, arresting 10 of the Communists.

A group of strikers uncoupled a locomotive from a freight train in a railway yard and drove it onto a key switch to block traffic.

Several hundred Communist youths entered west Berlin, offering to man the elevated trains. The strikers said they would fight any attempt to run the trains.

Acheson Seen Off to Paris By President

Secretary of State Dean Acheson, with heartiest wishes for success by the Nation's top officials sending him on his way, yesterday left for Paris and the fateful conference on Germany.

Shouts of "good luck" and "bring home the bacon!" marked his departure at 1:05 p. m. aboard President Truman's blue-and-silver airliner, Independence, but they only momentarily brightened the solemnity for this newest attempt to reach an agreement with Russia.

Acheson took with him to Monday's Big Four Foreign Ministers meeting—the third on Germany, and the first such conference in two years—a firm determination to make no agreement at the cost of democratic advances in West Germany.

Only the day before, he had announced that while the United States is "hopeful" of finding a method of reconciling Russian and Western views, we will not "barter away" basic rights.

At the Military Air Transport Service terminal, President Truman, Vice President Alben W. Barkley, Cabinet officers, State Department officials, diplomats and relatives chatted with Acheson in a general air of lightness and "bon voyage."

But when he said his final farewell at the ramp leading to the plane, President Truman clasped Acheson's hand and said softly and solemnly, "Goodby, Dean."

Asked if there are particularly hopeful signs for this conference, President Truman told reporters that remains to be seen. He added that we can tell more about it after it has been in session for some time.

Among those at the airport were the Achesons' daughters, Mrs. Dudley Brown and Mrs. William P. Bundy, and his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. David C. Acheson.

U. S., Britain Hit Russia's Approach on Greek Peace

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Soviet "peace feelers" for ending the Greek civil war are based on unacceptable terms, the United States and Britain said yesterday.

Both governments confirmed the Russian report that their representatives, during talks with Soviet Deputy Prime Minister Andrei Gromyko in New York, received a set of terms for ending the Greek conflict.

If Russia sincerely desires to bring about an end to the fighting in Greece, the United States and Britain declared in statements, the proper forum is the United Nations where the legal Greek government can participate.

Basic Issue Cited

"The basic issue in the Greek situation," declared the State Department, "is the violation of Greece's northern frontier by military and other assistance to the rebel forces in Greece."

Tass announced Thursday night that Gromyko, United States Assistant Secretary of State Dean Rusk and British Minister of State Hector McNeil had discussions on Greece starting April 26.

Like the sudden Tass disclosure last month that secret negotiations had been taking place on Berlin, the timing of yesterday's announcement by the Russians on the Greek talks caught the Western nations by surprise.

On Informal Level

The United States and Britain, who are furnishing military support to the Greek government, hastened to announce that they would never agree to anything involving the Greek issue without full participation by the Greeks themselves.

In contrast to the Russian report on talks which resulted in ending the Berlin blockade and setting Monday's conference in Paris of the Big Four Foreign Ministers, the Greek discussions were disclosed by Russia at a time when stalemate apparently had developed.

This left diplomats speculating whether they were launched as a further sign of conciliatory Russian efforts in the cold war, because the tide is so strong against the Greek Communists, or whether they were never intended for anything more than their propaganda value.

The Greek talks were precipitated by Rusk at a dinner table conversation at the home of United Nations Secretary General Trygve Lie on April 28—the day after Russia disclosed that the Berlin talks had been under way since February 15.

Two more talks were held on Greece, on May 4 and May 14.

In the second meeting, the State Department said, Gromyko referred to "peace" proposals made in Prague by Miltiades Porphyro-

While Clark's letter was being read to the House committee by Immigration Commissioner Watson B. Miller, a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee was being warned the Communist Party would go underground if required by law to register. This threat was delivered by Arnold Johnson, legislative secretary of the party.

"We wouldn't register," declared Johnson. "We would not abide by a law that violates the rights of the American people—the Bill of Rights and the Constitution."

The Senate subcommittee, which is studying two bills to require Communists to register and restrict their activities, questioned Johnson at length. He made his "underground" statement in answer to a question by Chairman O'Conor (D., Md.).

He accused Congress of attempting to "try the working class party for what its members believe in, teach and advocate." This, he declared, was "a crime against the Bill of Rights."

Questioned on International

Asked by Senator Eastland (D., Miss.) if the Communist International was formed "to promote world communism," the witness said:

"Yes, it was to strengthen communism."

"Would that mean setting up Communist states, controlled by Moscow, throughout the world?" Eastland asked.

Johnson said "the working class in each country would control that country" and denied any "common plan" to overthrow the United States Government. O'Conor then asked Johnson if he "admired" the Soviet Union.

"Oh, sure," the witness replied and added that he and his "associates" probably would seek a Soviet "way of life" if they came into power here.

Joseph Rainey of Philadelphia opposed the legislation as a "curb on real liberalism." Another witness, Winston McDaniel, University of Wisconsin student, took the non-Communist oath reluctantly and then assailed the measure as amounting to "stamping out" all liberal privileges in the United States.

By The Associated Press

An FBI agent testified yesterday that Valentine A. Gubitchev, 32, Russian espionage suspect, "took a long look over his shoulder" and then broke into a run while being trailed by Federal agents in New York.

Special Agent John R. Murphy, jr., gave that testimony at the end of the fourth week in the espionage trial of Judith Coplon, 28, former Justice Department analyst.

Murphy was one of a score or more FBI men who shadowed Gubitchev and Miss Coplon last winter and finally seized the pair on March 4.

Miss Coplon is accused of pilfering Government secrets to aid a foreign power, Russia. She faces a second trial with Gubitchev as codefendant on espionage conspiracy charges in New York when the case here is concluded.

Murphy testified that he trailed Miss Coplon from 191st st. in Upper Manhattan to Times Square on the evening of the arrest. He said Miss Coplon left the subway and walked west on 42d st.

Then Gubitchev appeared, he said, and strolled along about 25 feet behind Miss Coplon for some distance.

"Between 7th and 8th aves.," Murphy said, "Gubitchev took a long look over his shoulder. Later, he stopped and turned full around to see who was behind him."

Murphy did not say whether the Russian spotted him, but he said Gubitchev scampered for a bus. The FBI man ran, too.

"Immediately after we passed Miss Coplon, she broke into a run," Murphy said. "He got on the bus first, she immediately behind him."

Shortly thereafter, other FBI agents closed in and arrested the former Government girl and her alleged Soviet sweetheart on third ave. near Fifteenth st.

Once again, Defense Attorney Archibald Palmer rowed with Judge Albert L. Reeves less than 24 hours later the judge ordered a $100 contempt fine against him.

Palmer tried to reopen the incident which brought the contempt fine, reading from a transcript of the proceedings. But Judge Reeves told him sternly:

"We're not going into that."

When Palmer tried to talk again, Judge Reeves snapped:

"Did you hear what I said? We're not going into that."

That ended it.

Plea to Cut Marzani's Term Denied

District Court Judge Richmond B. Keech yesterday rejected a plea to reduce the one-to-three-year prison term on Carl Alto Marzani, former State Department employe, convicted for concealing Communist affiliations.

"I gave substantial consideration to this matter," the jurist told Marzani's attorney, Charles E. Ford. "I read it in the light of present conditions and in the light of conditions" at the time of sentencing.

"I believe the sentence was . . . a reasonable one and I'll therefore deny your motion."

Ford had urged the sentence be cut to the three months his client has already served. He stressed that effective last September 1, Congress had amended the False Claims Act, under which Marzani had been convicted, to lower the maximum sentence from 10 years imprisonment to 5 years.

The attorney also brought out that although the former Government worker had been convicted on 11 counts, 9 of these were quashed by the United States Court of Appeals and that the Supreme Court split 5 to 4 against removing the remaining two.

Johnson Forms Board to Guide Reserve Programs of Forces

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson yesterday created a permanent toplevel "Civilian Components Policy Board" to supervise and coordinate the reserve programs of the armed forces.

The 20-man group will be headed by a civilian chairman, and consist of six representatives each, from the Army, Navy and Air Force and a military executive officer. None of the members of the board have been selected as yet.

Johnson's directive orders the group to "develop over-all policies, coordinate and maintain surveillance over the plans, policies and programs" of the civilian components of the services. On questions of major policy the board will make recommendations to the Secretary of Defense. On other policy matters, it will act for him.

Replaces Gray Board

The group will replace the old Gray Board named by former Secretary James Forrestal, which submitted a lengthy blueprint for the reserve components last year after months of hearings and study. In effect, yesterday's action rejects their findings.

Among the duties of the new board are to review the budget recommendations of the armed forces reserve branches and to submit any new legislation which they consider necessary for the civilian components. They will review all present policies and regulations dealing with organization, training, equipment and size of the various reserve units.

Reserve Training Plans

The board also will monitor reserve training plans to assure maximum use of facilities by all branches of the service.

Representatives of the Army will consist of two Regulars, two National Guard officers and two Reserve officers. The Air Force will have similar representation, while the Navy delegation will be: one regular Navy and one regular Marine officer, two naval Reservists and two Marine Reservists (one of whom in each case must be aviators).

Mass., yesterday, Edelman denied membership in the Communist Party, according to the Associated Press.

The Associated Press quoted Edelman as saying that he "probably" applied for Communist Party membership six years ago. His wife said she was a Communist Party member in Indianapolis in 1943, the Associated Press reported.

Both declared, according to the Cambridge statement, that they have now "no affiliation whatever with the party."

Dr. Edelman said, according to the Associated Press, "To this day I disagree with the Communist Party and am completely loyal to the American Government and the American system of democracy."

Edelman was quoted as saying he attended several Communist meetings in Indianapolis "because of intellectual curiosity."

The Brooklyn physician added that he would welcome a hearing before a congressional committee.

Before the Atomic Energy Committee had announced its plans for a Monday hearing, O'Mahoney announced that because Edelman's name had been mentioned before his group he would give the scientist a chance to appear Tuesday.

Informed of the plans of the Atomic Energy group, O'Mahoney said that actually the questioning of Edelman was not the function of his Appropriations Subcommittee anyway but that he believed in giving the man a right to be heard since his name had been brought into a hearing before his group.

O'Mahoney reiterated his intention of so drafting a new provision in the Appropriations law that a fellowship for either secret or nonsecret work could not be given to a Communist.

He said he was still uncertain just what form such a provision would take.

Three students suspected of subversive leanings are being educated at public expense under the Atomic Energy Commission's scholarship program, Lilienthal acknowledged to the Appropriations group.

Other Cases Investigated

McMahon said several more cases are under investigation by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy.

McMahon told reporters the committee had been investigating the loyalty of scholars for three or four months, and had picked the cases of Hans Freistadt, acknowledged Communist who was awarded a $1600 fellowship, and Edelman for first hearings because they were "the most significant."

"There are several other cases which have not reached the stage for more than executive, rather than public, hearings," McMahon declared. "There will be no attempt to blacken anyone's name or reputation. The committee is committed to a vigorous ascertainment of the facts. We will run no spectacle, but neither are we going to pull any punches."

McMahon said his committee is determined to "get Communists out of public scholarships."

"We will find ways and means without much difficulty," he said. "Personally I do not have the distaste for FBI investigation that some of these people seem to have. I have never known the FBI to go out to hang anyone."

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) commented that it is "utter waste" of public funds to train any person whose loyalty is questionable under the AEC program, even on nonsecret work. The whole purpose of the program for which the Atomic Energy Commission is asking $3,314,350 in its budget this fiscal year, Hickenlooper noted, is to train scientists so they will be available in a pool for secret work if needed.

Hickenlooper wrote Lilienthal last July 30, declaring that if investigation of scholarship candidates was not undertaken "we may some day find ourselves in the position of having, with Government money, subsidized the education of a potential subversive who is not eligible for employment in the atomic energy program."

The AEC, however, did not cause investigations to be made except of those engaged in secret work. Since hearings of two committees have started, the AEC has agreed to have all fellowship holders sign a loyalty affidavit.

Lilienthal yesterday reiterated his opposition to an FBI loyalty check for all fellowship applicants and stressed his fear of encroachment by the Government in the field of education.

"I really think you are making a lot of unnecessary trouble for yourself by a completely doctrinaire attitude and not a realistic attitude," O'Mahoney said sharply.

Dr. Detlev W. Bronk, president of the National Research Council, a private organization of scientists chartered by Congress, emphasized his strong personal antagonism to Communism.

"I do not think a person who thinks he can be a member of the Communist Party and be loyal to the United States has the intellectual capacity to be a good scientist," Bronk declared.

Dr. Bronk said that if the National Science Foundation is established by Congress it could handle fellowships in nonsecret fields of scientific research and obviate the necessity of the Atomic Energy Commission's handling such work.

Smyth and Dean Win Approval of Senate

The Senate yesterday confirmed the appointments of Gordon Dean of California and Henry DeWolf Smith of New Jersey as members of the Atomic Energy Commission.

The appointments are to terms expiring June 30, 1950.

of roses from behind his back to present to Mrs. Acheson, who accompanied her husband to Paris. The "bring home the bacon" call came from John J. McCloy, who is retiring from the presidency of the World Bank to become United States member of the Allied High Commission for Germany.

Aboard the plane with the Achesons were John Foster Dulles, foreign affairs adviser to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in two campaigns, Mrs. Dulles; Robert Murphy, chief of the Office of German-Austrian Affairs; Administrative Aides Lucius Battle and Robert Barnes, and Brig. Gen. Robert Landry, President Truman's air aide.

Dulles said in a statement that since the two previous meetings on Germany which he attended—at Moscow and London in 1947—the western powers "have worked to fill in the moral, economic and military vacuum" left in Europe after World War II.

He expressed hope an agreement would be reached this time, for the western nations are "in a better position to register progress toward peace."

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin declared, en route to Paris yesterday, that "it's all in the lap of the Gods."

French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman will represent his nation, and Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky will speak for the Soviet.

Russia is reportedly sending to the conference a delegation as large or larger than the 65-member United States group.

Today, Acheson, Bevin and Schuman are expected to meet to discuss their views, which already have resulted in mutual agreement for plans for western Germany if there is no four-power accord.

Admiral Kirk, Others Confirmed as Envoys

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Admiral Alan G. Kirk, retired, to be United States Ambassador to Russia.

It also confirmed Capus M. Waynick of North Carolina to be Ambassador to Nicaragua and George R. Merrell of Misouri to be Ambasador to Ethiopia.

William C. Foster of New York was confirmed as United States special representative to Europe with the rank of ambassador.

Atom Unit to Meet Secretly

The Congressional Atomic Energy Committee will meet in secret session Monday to go further into the loss of a small amount of Uranium 235 at the Argonne National Laboratory in Chicago, it was announced yesterday.

Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) said the committee will hear reports from three of its staff investigators who have been gathering "first-hand facts" in the field.

Members of the Atomic Energy Commission, who gave an explanation of the incident at a three-hour committee session earlier this week, also will be called back for further discussion, McMahon said.

Western Germans Ratify Constitution

Allies Surprised

Soviet Lets W. German Trucks Roll

Berlin, May 20 (AP).—The Russians allowed West German truck traffic to flow along the autobahn from Helmstedt to Berlin without the promised interruptions today.

Four-power talks on economic questions proceeded more smoothly than they have for several days.

The change in the Soviet attitude on road traffic came as a surprise to Western authorities. First the Russians at Helmstedt had stopped all Berlin-bound freight which did not carry a Soviet zone permit.

Then yesterday they opened the autobahn, but said the bars would go up again today. They did not go up and no explanation was given.

Economic and financial experts of the four powers met during the day at the Russian headquarters in Karlshorst. A British spokesman said the conference was "satisfactory and helpful" and would clear the air considerably on reorganizing East-West trade in Germany.

The Western powers demanded that exports from western Berlin be allowed transit through the Soviet zone on west Berlin permits. The Russians insist on Soviet zone permits.

(The United Press said 15,000 German railroad workers went on strike at midnight tonight, threatening to halt all train traffic in and out of Berlin. The workers called the strike against the Russian-controlled German railway administration to enforce their demands for pay in Western marks. They have been paid in Soviet marks, whose value is about one-fourth that of the West mark.)

Frankfurt, Germany, May 20 (AP).—West Germany's new constitution, uniting 11 states in a federal republic, was ratified tonight.

The deciding vote was cast by the state parliament of North Rhine-Westphalia, which approved the constitution, 153 to 38, in Duesseldorf after a day-long debate interrupted frequently by Communist demonstrations.

North Rhine-Westphalia was the eighth of the 11 states, which make up the occupation zones of the United States, Britain and France, to indorse the charter. Approval by two-thirds of the states was required to make the constitution effective.

Only one state, Bavaria, voted against the charter, and its legislators agreed Bavaria would join the republic if the other 10 states decided to do so.

Two states have not yet voted, but are scheduled to vote by the weekend and their approval is almost certain.

The convention which wrote the constitution will reassemble at Bonn next Monday and proclaim its adoption. Parliamentary elections will follow and a west German government is due to be set up at Bonn by mid-July.

Austria Wants Big Four to Settle Treaty

Vienna, Austria, May 20 (AP).—Foreign Minister Karl Gruber said today Austria will demand United Nations recognition as a sovereign state and ouster of occupation troops if the Big Four fail to agree on an Austrian independence treaty in the Paris talks opening Monday.

There is no assurance the Big Four Foreign Ministers will consider Austria's status in Paris. Nor is there any assurance the U. N. would take up the Austrian case.

The Paris conference was called to discuss the future of Germany, which absorbed Austria in 1938 and lost it in defeat in 1945.

Gruber said that, if the Paris meeting breaks up without agreement, the provisional government will call for:

Abandonment of all treaty negotiations;

U. N. recognition of Austria as a sovereign state and an order for the immediate withdrawal of all occupation forces;

Treatment as an aggressor of any of the four powers which fails to remove its troops, and

Trade Pact Hopes Rise

Buenos Aires, Argentina, May 20 (U.P.).—Anglo-Argentine trade negotiations, on the verge of collapse for several weeks, were given a shot in the arm today at a private meeting between Foreign Minister Juan A. Bramuglia and British Ambassador Sir John Balfour.

Two Senators Clash Over Nazis' Trial

By The Associated Press

Senator McCarthy (R., Wisc.) yesterday stormed out of a Senate investigation of the Malmedy massacre trials because the committee refused to use lie detectors on witnesses. He charged it is trying to whitewash Army officers accused of brutality in getting confessions.

Chairman Baldwin (R., Conn.) shot back that McCarthy apparently has accepted "unsupported affidavits" of the Hitler Storm Troopers, "some of whom unquestionably were guilty of the cold-blooded murder of numerous American prisoners of war and helpless civilians, as against the sworn testimony of American officers and military personnel."

There has been testimony both ways on the main point of the inquiry, whether the Germans were mistreated to get them to confess prior to their trials abroad. McCarthy demanded that three Army investigators be given the lie tests.

Test Method Challenged

Baldwin and the Armed Services Subcommittee he heads refused. Baldwin said he didn't know how reliable the method was and anyway it would be unfair to test the Americans and not the Germans.

Baldwin accused McCarthy of exaggerations. He added:

"More than 100 unarmed surrendered American soldiers were brutally shot down in cold blood by German S. S. Troopers. To this day, not one has been executed for this crime. They have been tried and convicted. There have already been several reviews by the Army." He said the investigation of the Army's methods would continue.

McCarthy asserted: "I want no murdering Nazis freed." But he said "Gestapo and OGPU methods were used" instead of American justice. And the committee, he said, is "afraid of the facts."

McCarthy said he had "listened to testimony and seen documentary evidence to the effect that accused persons were subjected to beatings and physical violence in such forms as only could be devised by warped minds. They were subjected to sham trials, to mock hangings, and families were deprived of rations."

The two Senators fired their blast in prepared statements.

The Malmedy case goes back to Christmastime, 1944, when a company of Americans was enveloped in the Battle of the Bulge and shot down after they had surrendered. Others, together with Belgian civilians, were murdered elsewhere. The Army tried 74 Germans for the crime and 43 were sentenced to death. The Army then cut the number of death sentences to 12, and later 6 more were commuted to life imprisonment.

Church Assets Surveyed by Czech Officials

Prague, Czechoslovakia, May 20 (U.P.).—Czech authorities have started a detailed survey of all church property and income from church investments. The move was viewed as another government attempt to get a firmer control over religious life.

Reliable sources reported today that the Archbishop of Prague had told Czech priests that a recent meeting of bishops was halted because "listening equipment" was installed in the conference hall.

The sources said that the archbishop had written a letter to priests "for their information," charging that the Communist govenment was suppressing religious freedom and censoring and halting publications of the Catholic press.

Soviet Offer To End Greek War Assailed

Reds' Terms on Greek Peace Rejected by U. S. and Britain

Athens, May 20 (AP).—Russian proposals to end the Greek civil war were discussed by an authoritative source here today as "a maneuver which is part of the general Soviet propaganda framework."

"This is aimed at affecting the morale of the Greek armed forces and the civilian resistance to communism," said the authority, who asked that his name be withheld.

The Greek cabinet met for two and a half hours, then adjourned with the announcement that it had no statement to make.

A broadcast by the Greek guerilla radio said "foreign shedders of Greek blood and their domestic hirelings are attempting with fire and sword to suppress the unconquerable desire of the Greek people to put a stop to the bloodshed."

Qualified observers here said that, while the Moscow offer might appear good in some respects on the surface, "we've got to look for the joker."

genis, minister of justice for the Greek rebels who that week unsuccessfully sought entry to the United States to present his plans to U. N. General Assembly President Herbert V. Evatt.

Porphyrogenis—and Gromyko at that time—mentioned only a "cease-fire" order, a general amnesty to the rebels who have waged the current war against the Athens government since 1946 after an earlier conflict was settled the year before, and new elections in Greece.

On May 7, the State Department noted, the Greek rebel radio said press comments on rebel peace proposals were incorrect and no official rebel position had been announced.

On May 14, Gromyko said the Soviet would be willing to join in "control" of the northern Greece frontier—over which the rebels receive aid from Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia—big power supervision of the Greek elections, and, the key point in conflict—withdrawal of "all foreign military assistance, both materiel and personnel . . ."

The United States and Britain have repeatedly made it clear that they have no intention of withdrawing their military support of Greece while the rebels threaten the government.

If the border nations aiding the Greek rebels would cease their illegal aid, the two powers have stated, the civil war would collapse of its own accord.

The United Nations has similarly condemned Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia for supporting the guerilla warfare in Greece.

Russia's actions in "lending encouragement to the illegal operations" of these nations, the State Department said yesterday, "explain why peace has not yet been achieved."

Greek Ambassador Vassili C. Dendramis, who has been heading the Greek delegation to the United Nations, came down from New York yesterday and was called into Rusk's office to discuss the issue.

The Greek government, a high American official said, was not informed of the talks until after May 14, because they were previously so vague as to have little meaning.

After conferring with Rusk, Dendramis told reporters, "There is one condition for peace—that the rebels lay down their arms."

Asked if he felt assured that Greek interests were being protected, he replied "yes."

In recent weeks, the Greek rebels have suffered a number of serious military reverses, and according to reports here have been forced to employ women soldiers in increasing numbers and youths in their early 'teens.

The State Department, and the British Foreign Office, made it clear that they still welcome any "bona fide" effort by Russia to help end the civil war through the United Nations.

While their statements seemed to have slammed the door on any further talks on the Gromyko-Rusk-McNeil basis, the British statement said only that "so far" there have been "no further meetings . . . arranged with the Soviet representatives for discussion of Greece."

Gromyko has returned to Moscow, and McNeil to London.

It seemed probable, however, that the Greek issue might be raised at the Paris conference of Foreign Ministers, although the State Department said on this score:

"At no time during any of the informal conversations . . . was any suggestions made that the Greek question be discussed in the Council of Foreign Ministers."

"The United Nations has had this problem before it since 1946," declared the State Department, "and has established the means for settling it. The General Assembly elected both the Soviet Union and Poland to membership on the present United Nations Special Committee on the Balkans, but both have refused to take their seats."

Saw King George At Mayo Clinic, Nebraskan Says

Nebraska City, Nebr., May 20 (AP).—Walter Kirtley, local Chamber of Commerce president, said today a patient he saw carried into a Rochester (Minn.) hospital two weeks ago was identified to him as King George VI of England. A Mayo Clinic spokesman said there was "absolutely nothing to the report."

In Washington a British Embassy press officer said "this probably belongs in the department of understatement, but I should regard the matter with some reserve."

Kirtley said he saw a procession of automobiles pull up to the rear door of St. Mary's Hospital and a man was unloaded and carried in. He said the patient was accompanied by doctors, nurses, and others. Kirtley said a girl at the door told him the patient was King George.

Kirtley said he received verification from "too many unrelated sources" to leave any doubt in his mind that the patient was King George. He added that in the next several days a large automobile with the British lion on the hubcaps was in evidence.

Powerless U. S. Seen Result of Communists' Plea

New York, May 20 (AP).—Defense attorneys seeking dismissal of the indictment of 11 high Communists were told by the court today the Government would be powerless to defend itself under the doctrine they advocate.

The defense argued that the prosecution, which concluded its case yesterday, had not proved that a "clear and present danger" to the Government existed because of the activities of the defendants.

Federal Judge Harold R. Medina reserved ruling on the issue until Monday or later but said he was confident the Government had "made out a prima facie case" which should go to the jury.

CAB Accused Of Bias in Airline Case

By The Associated Press

Senators Johnson (D., Colo.) and O'Conor (D., Md.) yesterday accused the Civil Aeronautics Board of "Flagrant discrimination" against a much-decorated World War II veteran.

The veteran, Charles F. Willis, jr., testified before a Senate Commerce Committee investigating the airline industry.

He said the CAB, in a decision last month, refused a certificate to his air-freight company, Willis Air Service, Inc., with headquarters at Teterboro, N. J. Willis charged the CAB with "error" in awarding the New York-Florida route his firm has been flying to another applicant, U. S. Airlines, "with more money."

He asked the subcommittee to "help us in our fight for survival."

Johnson, the subcommittee chairman, said he was familiar with the board's decision, and commented that it was a case of "flagrant discrimination" against Willis. O'Conor remarked that Johnson had "put it accurately."

Willis said he and a few of his Navy buddies started the air service company on a financial shoestring after the war.

Reds to Free Jap Prisoners

London, May 20 (U.P.).—Russia announced today it would repatriate all remaining Japanese prisoners of war, listed as 95,000, by November, except accused war criminals still being investigated.

The announcement was made by the USSR Council of Ministers repatriation agency over the Mosow radio. The agency said the Soviets imprisoned 594,000 Japanese troops and released 70,880 immediately after the war. Another 418,166 were repatriated between December 1, 1946, and May 1, 1949.

(Japanese officials said today Russian figures failed to account for nearly 375,000 Japanese still believed in Soviet territory.)

The Moscow radio mentioned only "soldiers and officers." No mention was made of thousands of civilians who, the Japanese claimed, also were taken.

Kelley Doubtful Truman Will Send Him to Geneva

Representative Kelley (D., Pa.) said yesterday he doubts reports that President Truman has named him a delegate to the Geneva meeting of the International Labor Conference next month.

The "announcement" of his selection was made Thursday by Representative Powell (D., N. Y.) who, like Kelley, is a member of the House Labor Committee.

Powell protested that the move had "thrown out of gear" Administration efforts to pass a Taft-Hartley repeal bill at this session of Congress, since the Labor Subcommittee is split 13 to 12 on "liberal" labor legislation and Kelley's vote is needed to maintain that slim majority.

Big Shanghai Fires Rage on Waterfront

By Fred Hampson

Shanghai, May 20 (AP).—Huge fires raged tonight east of the Whangpoo River in the Pootung waterfront district of Red-besieged Shanghai

Apparently set by shelling and Nationalist defensive demolitions the fearsome chain of fires—this correspondent counted 26—stretched from industrial installations a few hundred feet from the river bank northward to the mouth of the Whangpoo.

Otherwise Shanghai was comparatively quiet. A little shellfire and some machinegun bursts were audible.

The Communists definitely have light artillery on the east bank now. Four shells fell in the former French concession Thursday night.

The Communists did not appear to be pressing their drives from the east, west or southwest.

What had looked like signs of Nationalist withdrawal Thursday night appeared less so tonight.

A Central Air Transport Corp. plane unloaded small-caliber ammunition from Formosa during the afternoon.

Police Commissioner Mao Sen was quoted as saying heavy troop reinforcements also were coming into Shanghai.

Unconfirmable rumors said these troops were coming from Formosa and that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek would take personal command of them. The whereabouts of Chiang were uncertain, but he was not believed to be still in Shanghai.

The government's military spokesman in Canton said the "big battle" for Shanghai would commence soon. He added optimistically that "Shanghai may prove the burying ground for Communist Gen. Chen Yi's forces and the turning point in the war against the spread of Communism."

This spokesman, Gen. Teng Wen-yi, said the Reds were using 10 armies in the Shanghai area. This would be about 150,000 men.

There was no news from either side of the Reds' cross-country drive in the south. They last were reported 31 miles from the southeastern port of Foochow and 225 miles north of Canton, the Nationalists' provisional capital.

Navy Readies Plans To Evacuate Americans

Aboard Flagship USS El Dorado off China Coast, May 20 (U.P.)—Vice Adm. Oscar C. Badger today said the United States Navy in China waters is readying plans to evacuate Americans who may want to quit South China.

Press reports received aboard the El Dorado that Nationalist officials planned to abandon Canton indicated the purpose of Badger's mission to South China.

Dutch Offer to Move Jogjakarta Civilians

Jogjakarta, Java, May 20 (AP).—Civilians who do not wish to remain in Jogjakarta under Indonesian Republican rule will be evacuated from the city by the Dutch army, starting next Monday or Tuesday.

J. C. Lycklama, Dutch civilian administrator, said 20,000 have registered for evacuation. He expects the total to reach 40,000.

Garris 'Clew' Ruled Out

Atlanta, May 20 (AP).—Atlanta police today ruled out completely the story of a young woman who said she saw opera singer John Garris shot to death.

Leaders Fight For Power as China Flames

Canton, China, May 20 (AP).—Like a band of Oriental Neros, Chinese Nationalist leaders are fiddling while their country burns.

In their last-minute internal struggle for power, the major battle of the moment is whether the government shall move to the island of Formosa or west to Chungking, which served as capital in the war against Japan.

The outcome may determine whether acting president Li Tsung-Jen stays in office or gives way to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Reds Seen Victors Now

Foreign observers do not believe the bickering will make any difference as far as the civil war is concerned. They are convinced the Nationalists have lost it. But they see the internal jockeying in these terms:

Li wants to move to the west to continue fighting or make a bargain with the Reds.

Chiang wants to take the government to Formosa, believing that before the Reds can root him out of that island fortress, war will develop between the United States and Russia, and he will be America's ally in the East.

No one trusts anyone else. Li has the post of acting president, but no authority. Chiang has not given him any help, and without it he cannot do anything.

Backers Take 'Last Chance'

Chiang has the loyalty of the men who rode to power with him more than 20 years ago. They see in him their last chance to retain some of that power.

Li has the support of a handful of moderates and some anti-Chiang men who never were permitted to attain any stature when Chiang was top man.

Some sources foresee a final split on the Formosa-or-Chungking issue.

If Li goes West, many government figures loyal to Chiang may refuse to follow. This could result in a "call" to Chiang to step forward officially as the Nationalist chief—a position he never really has abandoned.

Representative John Bell Williams (D., Miss.) who lost his arm in military service, broke in:

"Don't forget the commissary and PX privileges."

Two Amendments Offered

"That's right," said Sutton. "He buys his groceries and clothes at the commissary. He gets a diamond ring and fur coat at wholesale cost and without tax."

"Television, too," shouted a member from the back of the chamber.

Sutton contended in conclusion that all in all, "the general makes more than the Secretary of Defense." He offered an amendment to knock out all pay increases in the bill, leaving provisions curtailing physical retirement benefits.

New Action Planned To Give Vaughan Medal

Representative Overton Brooks (D., La.) moved yesterday to unfreeze a bill that would let Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, President Truman's military aide, keep his controversial Argentine medal.

A House Armed Services subcommittee, of which Brooks is chairman, voted Thursday to put the bill in cold storage. Brooks said yesterday he expects to ask the subcommittee "to take up the matter for consideration in the near future."

The bill covers 105 decorations from 21 foreign governments to 97 officers, plus gifts of watches to two officers. Congressional approval is required before the officers can keep the awards.

Andrews Field

Air Reserve Base to Close On July 1

The Air Force Reserve Training Center at Andrews Air Force Base—only station for flight training of Greater Washington reservists — will be deactivated July 1.

More than 400 Reserve officers and enlisted men are affected by the move, according to Maj. Ernest W. Burton, USAFR, commanding officer of the 63d Troop Carrier Squadron. The squadron is one of four reserve outfits in training at Andrews.

Major Burton said yesterday that the reserve training program was killed to permit regular Air Force officers stationed at the Pentagon to fly from the field. Presently, he said, Regulars are getting in their required flying time at Bolling Air Force Base.

The reservists were told, he said, that the Air Force is bringing 75 aircraft to Andrews Field for use of Pentagon flying officers. He said the part-time flyers were informed that hangar and maintenance space for the planes will crowd out the Reserve program.

A different explanation, however, was given by a spokesman in the office of Lieut. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, chief of the Air Force's Reserve program.

The spokesman said that Reserve activities at Andrews were being closed down because facilities there were inadequate to carry out Reserve training requirements. He described the facilities as "very limited."

Congress, he said, made funds available for 23 Reserve centers over the country. Their locations were determined by population area and the facilities each afforded.

To qualify Andrews Air Force Base as a training center, about 500,000 square feet of space—for hangars, classrooms, shops, an administration building, and other facilities—would be required, he said. The facilities are lacking.

Only recourse for Greater Washington reservists is to join a volunteer training unit—ground instruction—or to acquire a "mobilization day" assignment, which permits training in the task they would step into should the country mobilize, the Air Force spokesman said.

According to the Air Force, more than 1200 pilots stationed at the Pentagon have been flying out of Bolling field to maintain rated status. They are required to fly a minimum of 100 hours a year.

Soviet Counts Students

London, May 20 (U.P.)—School and technical college enrollment in the Soviet Union now totals 34,500,000, the official newspaper Pravda said today. The figure covered 220,000 schools conducted by 1,300,000 teachers.

Atlantic Pact Called Step to Needless War

A meeting called by five noted Americans including Albert Einstein and Thomas Mann was told here last night that the Atlantic Pact is a step toward forcing this country into "a needless and criminal war" with Russia.

Dr. James W. Wise, son of the late Rabbi Stephen Wise, told a cheering Cosmos Club audience of 100 clergy, education and labor leaders gathered here from all parts of the country:

"Amerian history will yet record that not we are disloyal but those who are trying to antagonize us and the Russian people and force us into a needless and criminal war.

"I do not whitewash dictatorships—I am opposed to them whether in Stalin's Georgia or Talmadge's Georgia," Wise, a director of the Council Against Intolerance in America, declared. "We are not for Russia. But we are eternally against any military alliances which will provoke and hasten and make war inevitable. A pact of this kind is nothing less than a further step in support of dictatorships, of all forces stopping human progress throughout the world."

Wise was one of four speakers to address the meeting, at which Einstein was to appear but was prevented by illness, according to a conference spokesman.

Idea for the conference, "peaceful alternatives to the Atlantic Pact," originated at a meeting some weeks ago called by Einstein at his home in Princeton, N. J., the spokesman said. Other sponsors besides Mann include Emily Greene Balch, 82-year-old Nobel peace prize winner in 1946; the Rev. Edwin T. Dahlberg, executive secretary of the Northern Baptist Convention, and Bishop W. J. Walls, Chicago, Ill., of the A. M. E. Zion hurch.

Of the initiators of the conference, which will continue in session today, only Miss Balch was present last night. She said that "the cards are very much stacked against us—at the last moment we are pulling ourselves together."

This sentiment was echoed by another speaker, Mrs. Alexander Stewart, president of the United States section of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, who said that the chances for killing arms implementation of the pact were much greater than for defeating its ratification.

The pact was described as "political folly" by the Rev. John Thompson, dean of the University of Chicago's Rockefeller Memorial Chapel. He blasted the State Department as "our sacred cow" and asserted that "the most serious lag in American life is the great lag between the people's will to peace and the policies of the State Department."

Hugh Bryson, head of the National Union of Marine Cooks and Stewards," characterized the pact as a treaty which "intends to extend the firing squad for those who go on strike to all of Europe"

Promotion List Faces Return

By the United Press

Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) asserted yesterday that President Truman is going to send back to the Army a promotion list.

Russell is chairman of a Senate Armed Services Subcommittee appointed last week to look into a three-month delay in forwarding the list to the Senate. The inquiry was promoted by suggestions that the delay was due to "politics" or to some backstage maneuvering by Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, Army aide to the President.

The White House and Vaughan both denied the imputation.

Russell said Mr. Truman is "displeased" with the list and feels that it was "hastily drawn." He said he now probably will hold up everything until a new Secretary of the Army is named. The old list was submitted before Kenneth C. Royall resigned the Army post.

Separated Siamese Twin Normal at 14

Louisville, Ky., May 20 (AP).—A Louisville mother revealed today that her 14-year-old son is one of the few known individuals to live after separation from a Siamese twin.

Edward

Mrs. William Rakestraw, 36, said her son, Edward Wesley Kurtz, is healthy, perfectly proportioned and intelligent. He gets along well in his studies and plays football, basketball and baseball.

Two Louisville physicians confirmed that Edward was born September 5, 1934, joined to another twin just below the breast. It became apparent that the other boy would not live, so the two were separted December 7, 1934.

Mother Says Twins Won't Be Exhibited

Los Angeles, May 20 (AP).—"They are worth more than money," says Mrs. John B. Jones of her Siamese twin daughters. "I have no intention of making them public exhibits."

The 35-year-old mother named the twins Mary Yvette and Gladys Yvonne. They were born Saturday, and are joined at the top of their heads with their feet in opposite directions, and are slightly turned.

Meta Marie Keller of Streator, Ill., was separated from her twin sister at birth February 1, 1928. The babies were connected at the abdomens by a 6-inch strip of tissue. Miss Keller has enjoyed excellent health, been a brilliant student and will be graduated from the University of Illinois next month.

Churchill Hails U. S. in Attack On Socialism

Glasgow, Scotland, May 20 (AP).—Winston Churchill charged tonight that the logical end of British socialism is a Communist-like state and declared: "Socialism has never succeeded anywhere in the world."

Britain's wartime Prime Minister made a bitter attack on the Labor (Socialist) Party and its policies of state ownership in a political speech here before 22,000.

Churchill accused Labor Party leaders of having "derided and reviled" the capitalistic economic system of the United States.

"But they are living on them and begging from them while at the same time they abuse them," the Conservative Party leader said.

"It must occur to sensible people to ask themselves how it is, if this American system is so wrong, that the American democracy of 140 million hard working people are able to keep themselves at a far higher standard of life than we are and are able to lend us a helping hand and give us so much aid and bear so large a part of our burden."

He said the United States is "beyond doubt or question the leading power in the world." It has used its power "only for further self-sacrifice and exertion in the world cause of peace and freedom."

Club Leaves Its Jefferson Island Base

The Jefferson Island Club, organized 20 years ago by the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and other political notables, has moved its headquarters from the Chesapeake Bay to the Potomac River.

The club, of which President Truman is a member, has abandoned its base at Valliant and Poplar Islands on the Eastern Shore side of the Chesapeake just off Talbot County.

New headquarters for the club is St. Catherine Island in the Potomac. The island is toward the Maryland side of the river, and directly across from Stratford, Va., birthplace of Robert E. Lee.

The club took an option on St. Catherine Island shortly after the war and exercised the option after the clubhouse on Valliant Island was destroyed by fire in 1946. The club then sold its property in the Chesapeake Bay.

Former Representative Pete Jarman of Alabama is president of the club and its vice presidents include Speaker Sam Rayburn, Vice President Barkley, Jesse Jones, Bernard Baruch, Leslie Biffle, Breckinridge Long and Senator Millard Tydings of Maryland.

The club has decided to expand its limit on the membership maximum from 100 to 200.

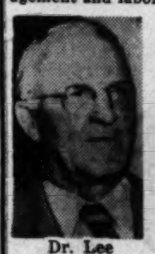
Baptists Hear Kerr Deplore Labor Strife

Special Dispatch to The Post

Oklahoma City, Okla., May 20.—Senator Robert S. Kerr (D., Okla.) today called upon leaders in management and labor and other fields to "bear their witness as Christian citizens."



Dr. Lee

The former Oklahoma Governor addressed the ninety-second annual sessions of the Southern Baptist convention, of which he is the newly elected second vice president. Dr. Robert Lee, unanimously reelected president of the convention, presided.

Expressing his gratitude for the "progress and power of America," the legislator said that while he was cognizant of the contributions of management and labor, he was "also aware of the unceasing struggle that goes on between the two."

"I have seen the loss and the failure that are the products when cross purposes and mutual suspicion and hatreds bring about deadlocks in the relations between the two," he said, in urging "men in responsible positions on both sides to beat witness as Christian citizens."

Two District of Columbia clergymen were appointed to special committees today. The Rev. Frank Burress, pastor of Fountain Memorial Baptist Church, was named to the committee on boards, and the Rev. A. Lincoln Smith, pastor of Congress Heights Baptist Church, to the committee to study the field of theological education.

The convention voted today to go to Chicago in 1950—the first time in 104 years it has gone that far north for a meeting place.

Some churchmen attributed the decision to a trend toward expansion of Southern Baptist influence through the United States.

24 Nothern Churches Welcomed

The Baptists welcomed 24 churches from Oregon and Washington, generally conceded to be in the northern territory.

"I don't think we should go into the Northern Convention's territory," protested an anonymous Baptist from the floor. "If these churches can't cooperate with the Northern Convention, they might not cooperate with us."

Dr. Wayne Dehoney, Pineville, Ky., keynoted the issue with the statement:

"The Southern Baptist Convention no longer has geographical boundaries—only doctrinal boundaries."

The Baptists were split into northern and southern groups by the Civil War.

The Southern Conference now claims 6,500,000 members, the Northern Convention 1,500,000.

The chapel is a memorial to the Poling family. Dr. Poling's father was a minister, his mother one of the first woman evangelists, and his brother and two sons also entered the ministry. One son, Clark Poling, was one of the four chaplains who died when the troop transport Dorchester was sunk during World War II.

A plaque marking the chapel will read "The Poling Youth Chapel, May 22, 1949, dedicated in honor of a family rich in service to God and country."

Dedication will take place at the evening service, with the Rev. George E. Schnabel, minister of Albright, presiding. The choir of Cheverly Community Church will sing.

The chapel, which seats 150 persons, will be used by members of the junior and senior high school departments of the church. Six classrooms for use by the church school are arranged around the chapel.

Albright is the national memorial church of the Evangelical United Brethren and is named for the founder of the Evangelical Church, Jacob Albright.

Calvary Church To Honor Choir

By Rising Vote

Presbyterian Unity Move Under Way

Buffalo, N. Y., May 20 (AP).—The Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. today took steps toward unification of "all churches of the Presbyterian family."

Dr. Barbour

The action was taken by unanimous rising vote shortly after its general assembly came under guidance of a Southerner for the first time since 1834.

The new moderator, Dr. Clifford Edward Barbour of Knoxville, Tenn., declared the vote "practically unanimous."

The Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. has a membership of about 2,300,000, mostly in the Northern States. The Southern Presbyterian Church has about 600,000 members. The two split during the Civil War.

The assembly approved inviting the Southern Presbyterians, the general assembly of the United Presbyterian Church of North America, the general synod of the Reformed Church in America and the general assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and such other Presbyterian bodies as may be willing to do so, "to consider a larger union of all churches of the Presbyterian family."

The move will be made even if the Southern Church rejects the invitation. It will meet next week in Montreat, N. C.

Spring Meetings Open In Pennsylvania

Buck Hills Falls, Pa., May 20 (AP). Two Presbyterian Church groups opened spring meetings today with a vote on a proposed merger the main item on the agenda.

Attending the sessions at this Pocono Mountain resort are about 600 delegates from the Reformed Presbyterian Church of America and the United Presbyterian Church of North America.

The Reformed group has a membership of about 200,000 while United membership is listed at 225,000.

The churchmen will vote next Wednesday on whether to send the merger proposal to the congregations of the two churches.

Rites to Honor Gen. Pershing At Cathedral

The late Gen. John J. Pershing, World War I commander, who died July 15, 1948, will be honored at the twenty-second annual massing of the colors service at 4 p. m. Sunday in the outdoor Amphitheater of the Washington Cathedral.

Veterans patriotic and civic organizations have been invited to participate in the service in memory of the Nation's war dead.

Paul H. Griffith, past national commander of the American Legion, who is now a personal assistant to Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson, will be the speaker.

Col. James B. Jones, USA (retired), who served as an officer overseas with General Pershing, will lead the procession through the Cathedral grounds and down the pilgrim steps into the amphitheater.

Beginning at 3:30 p. m., the United States Marine Band, under the direction of Maj. William F. Santelmann, will give a concert.

Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., will honor its choir members, and observe the tenth anniversary of the inauguration of the Westminister plan of church music at services Sunday.

Dr. Williamson

Clyde J. Holt, ministfer o music of the church, explained that the We s tminister plan is a graded system of choirs for members of every age group in the church.

Every church member, from the nallest child to the oldest adult, may participate in this musical p ogram," he said.

Founder To Speak

Dr. John Finley Williamson, founder of the Westminister choir, and president of Westminister Choir College, Prineton, N. J., originated the plan. He will speak at services at 9 and 11:15 a.m. at Calvary church.

At the 9 a.m. family service, the Cherub and Carol Choirs, composed of children 4 through 7, will sing. At the 11:15 a.m. service the Adult Choir will sing.

A choral festival is planned f r the 8 p.m. service. Combined Calvary, Chapel, Intermediate, Junior and Washington Boy and Girl Choirs will sing. Each choir will present one number, and the combined group will sing two numbers under the direction of Dr. Williamson.

Plan Launched In 1939

The Westminister plan was launched at Calvary Church in 1939 under the direction of Herbert Pate, minister of music until 1946. Today the church has a graded choir system of eight choirs, with more than 500 members.

Several years ago the church developed the Washington Boy and Girl Choir for children who live in the area and participate in programs at the church community center.

Margaret Barnwell, soprano soloist, will join in the festival service.

Rogation Day Rites Listed

Trumpeters will accompany the vested choir of St. Thomas Church, 1772 Church st. nw., at a Rogation Day festival of flowers at 11 a. m. Sunday.

The rector, the Rev. Harold Bend Sedgwick, will preach the sermon. During the service the children will make a great floral cross, which will be carried out by the crucifer in the recessional.

After the service there will be a brief outdoor service at which a dogwood tree will be planted in memory of the late Mrs. Albert P. Niblack, whose husband was Vice Admiral of the Mediterranean Fleet during World War I.

South Begins Regional Plan For Education

Atlanta, May 20 (AP). — The South's plan for regional education was in effect today.

Contracts were signed by the Regional Council for Education with the Medical College of Virginia, Louisiana State University, Emory University and Vanderbilt University for medical and dental training.

In addition, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, acting for the Commonwealth of Virginia, signe a contract providing for veterinary medical training for Virginia students at the University of Georgia.

Approximately 225 white and 200 Negro students are expected to enroll this fall under the contracts, and under 10 new ones to be executed shortly.

Under the contracts, States which do not provide medical, dental, or veterinary training agree to pay to the institutions $1500 a year for each medical or dental student, and $1000 a year for each veterinary medical student enrolled. In return, the States are assured that a set number of their qualified students will be admitted to the schools, so that the States can meet their needs without the expense of operating medical, dental, or veterinary schools.

Each State in the plan is assigned a quota. Selections will be made by the regional service institutions from students certified by the States.

Clearing Bids Are Received

Seven concerns have submitted bids ranging from $8555 to $34,332 for clearing the site of the proposed new Senate Office Building.

The bids, submitted to the office of Capitol Architect David Lynn, are under study and no date is set for awarding the contract, officials said.

Low bid was submitted by the Ace Wrecking & Building Material Co. The highest bid was from the Edward J. Rose Co. Other firms and their bids were General Wrecking Co., $14,000; Eastern States Wrecking & Construction Co., $13,997.11; Arrow Wrecking & Lumber Co., $15,140.35; ABCD Corp., $18,650, and Hechinger Engineering Corp., $21,894.

The new building is to front on First st. from B to C st., ne. The site includes a portion of the Schott Alley slum area.

Officials said court orders have been posted for residents of all but four of the 23 alley dwellings, and all but three of the 33 dwellings fronting the street, to vacate. The officials said so far occupants have been vacating in line with the notices, and unless some hitch develops, no further legal action is planned to clear the buildings.

Gary's Mayor Closes Streets In 'Emergency'

Gary, Ind., May 20 (AP).—Mayor Eugene Swartz and City Traffic Director Charles Walker today declared "a state of emergency" because of a heavy traffic toll and closed sections of Gary's most heavily-traveled streets.

The mayor, aroused by what he termed the Nation's highest auto accident toll for a city of Gary's size, said he planned a trip to Indianapolis to confer with Governor Henry F. Schricker on the problem.

The city yesterday recorded its 18th vehicle fatality of the year—nine more than for the same period a year ago.

The intersection here of State Roads 312 and 12 was barricaded to traffic after a man was killed in an auto-truck crash there.

Another intersection a half a mile further out on Road 312 also was closed and traffic was detoured.

Grand Coulee Switch Thrown By President

By the United Press

President Truman put the tenth main generator at Grand Coulee Dam into operation yesterday, at the same time urging a single Columbia Valley Administration for development of the Northwest.

The President signalled start of the new generator by pressing a gold telegraph key on his desk at 3 p. m. (EDT.)

A few minutes after the switch was thrown, Mr. Truman received a message from F. A. Banks, district manager for the Bureau of Reclamation, from the power house control room. He told the President:

"Power from the generator you pu on the line is now lighting homes, serving farms and driving the wheels of industry throughout the Pacific Northwest."

Recalling that he sent Congress a special message April 13 urging creation of a Columbia Valley Administration to coordinate Federal activities in the area, the President said:

"It is my hope to see more of these great steps, such as the one we are witnessing today, as part of a continuously developing program, organized under a single administration concerned with the problems peculiar to the Northwest.

The various Federal agencies have already done much to develop the area of the Columbia River. Now, by uniting their activities and authority in one administration, the entire program can be geared more efficiently to the rapid growth of the area."

Rev. Foy to Preach

The Rev. J. D. Foy, pastor of Mount Zion Methodist Church, 1334 29th st. nw., who has been attending the annual denominational conference at Pittsburgh, Pa., will preach on "The Race of Patience Endurance" at 11 a. m. Sunday.

Doctors Report

Fruit Juices Seem to Help Thrombosis

New York, May 20 (AP).—A fruit juice highball is apparently a good way to prevent coronary thrombosis, one of the worst of heart attacks, Dr. Ernest Klein reported today.

This highball is one-fourth fruit juice and three-fourths water, with a little sugar—nothing else. It acts quickly to make human blood less thick and sticky, which qualities may be the cause of the heart attacks, he said. Avoiding red meats and liver also helps greatly.

Dr. Klein reports the new treatment in New York Medicine today.

Dr. Klein, a blood specialist at Bellevue, said he found five years ago that many people who suffered these heart attacks had the sticky blood because of a higher content of hemoglobin, the protein that gives blood its red color.

Dry foods—like bread, potatoes and cake—red meats and liver, and other foods very rich in protein all increase hemoglobin, he said.

Eating only fruits and vegetables brings it down quickly, but most effective, he said, is the 3 to 1 mixture of water and natural citrus fruit juice, with a half ounce of sugar per pint.

Drinking six to eight tall glasses of this a day brings the hemoglobin down in as fast as two days, he reported.

Most people following the diet recovered in four to six weeks, Dr. Klein said.

Derailment Slows Trains Into Capital

Inbound Washington passengers were delayed up to two hours yesterday by the derailment of a freight train on the main-line Pennsylvania Railroad tracks at Rahway, N. J.

It was about 4:25 p. m. before regular incoming schedules were being maintained, a Union Station spokesman said. The Federal out of Boston was the first train in here to be affected by the wreck, arriving at 10:03 a. m. (DST) instead of its customary 8 a. m. The New York-Washington Express, due in at 9 a. m., arrived at 10:51.

Many commuters from Baltimore were able to catch trains coming in from the West. Passengers who usually come on the 8:14 from Baltimore caught the 8:38 for a delay of only about 22 minutes.

The derailment blocked traffic for hours on all six of the main-line tracks.

Fourteen cars of the 79-car freight jumped the tracks at 3:40 a. m., chewing up the rails and leaving the boxcars and their cargo sprawled over the entire right-of-way.

Imperturbable Judge

Thousands of people who are eager to see Judith Coplon get a fair trial will probably applaud the fine imposed on her lawyer by Judge Albert L. Reeves on Thursday. The lawyer, Archibald Palmer, has stretched out Miss Coplon's trial on espionage charges to four weeks by tantalizing slow-down maneuvers. As in the trial of the Communist leaders in New York, the obvious purpose is to make a mockery of democratic justice. The people may well be thankful that they have on the bench men who are neither bewildered nor intimidated by these tactics.

The position of a judge in such circumstances is extremely difficult. Every conscientious judge wishes the defense of an accused person to be thorough and exact as to details. He must be patient, as Judge Reeves has been patient, in permitting the lawyers to present their cases and cross-examine witnesses in their own way. Yet he must also recognize that there is a point beyond which quibbling, obstruction and mere filibustering in the courtroom cannot be tolerated. Under very trying conditions, Judge Reeves has presided over this trial with common sense, cool judgment, and firm adherence to the elementary rules of justice. His final resort to the contempt power is a salutary reminder that the courts are not helpless in their struggle to prevent the administration of justice from being turned into a mockery by lawyers who are a disgrace to their profession.

Standing Room Only

It appears to us at this point that certain congratulations are owing to Mr. George Orwell, author of the lively little politico-ideological allegory called Animal Farm. The story, as doubtless you recall, purports to be the history of a farm somewhere in England where the domestic animals revolted against a tyrannical and somewhat decadent master, and after expelling him with his family and his hired assistants, took over the operation of the place themselves, the work of direction being assumed largely by the pigs. A sort of constitution or charter of principles was drawn up to the effect that everything was now to be done solely for the equal benefit of the animal inmates and no human being would ever again be permitted to reside on the farm. Since these revolutionary principles were a bit too abstruse and complicated for the slow-witted sheep, they were put into a simplified formula which the sheep, after careful coaching by the pigs, learned to bleat in chorus. The formula was Four legs good; two legs bad.

In course of time, however, the pigs, by which Mr. Orwell evidently meant to symbolize the Communist Party leadership, gradually usurped the position and prerogatives that had been enjoyed by the former owner. Not content with this, they began to imitate his grosser habits in such matters as the wearing of clothes, getting drunk on hard cider, and walking on two legs. This, of course, necessitated some alteration of the revolutionary slogans. The sheep were now taught to bleat

Four legs good; two legs better.

With what profound prescience Mr. Orwell anticipated the evolution of the party line is shown by the bitter attack in the Soviet newspaper Izvestia against a biologist with the appropriate name of Dr. Antipin, said to be a follower of the notorious warmongering American imperialist, Thomas Hunt Morgan, and of the clerical arch-reactionary Gregor Mendel. Now among the various heresies attributed to Dr. Antipin is that of having said that "every four-legged animal excels man. Men, in fact, have been deteriorating biologically ever since they began to go around in upright postures. They have lost, among other things, the sense of smell, their teeth are no good and their women feel obliged to distinguish themselves from monkeys by painting their lips."

It is possible, of course, that Dr. Antipin's intentions in saying all this were quite innocent, and that like former Comrade Browder he was merely a little slow going round the curves of the party line. For if half of what we have heard of life in the Soviet state is correct, Dr. Antipin might well have supposed that the aim of the Bolshevist revolution had made everyone revert to a horizontal position.

Emergency Strikes

It now seems to be taken for granted that the new labor relations bill, whenever it is enacted, will contain a provision dealing with national emergencies resulting from strikes. House leaders are said to look with favor upon use of court injunctions in such cases, as provided in the Sims bill. On the Senate side, the proposal of Senators Taft, Smith and Donnell for either enjoining strikes or seizing and operating struck plants seems to be gaining favor as a basis for compromise. This is a salutary development, for the present experimental provisions are certainly defective.

Under the Taft-Hartley Act the President may appoint boards of inquiry to investigate the facts of any labor-management dispute that may imperil the national health or safety. But those boards may only report their findings of facts, without recommendations. Clearly this is a mistake. The most useful task an emergency board can perform is to focus public opinion upon simple recommendations for settlement of a strike. The T-H Act also requires that, if a strike threatening national disaster is enjoined, the workers must vote on acceptance of their employer's last offer. Experience has proved such referendums to be useless maneuvers. Correction of both these mistakes now has widespread support.

The earmarks of careful thinking about the problem are more evident in the Taft-Smith-Donnell suggestion than in any other. These legislators would give the President the emergency-board weapon, plus the right to appeal to the courts for either an injunction halting the strike or a green light to seize and operate a struck plant. The proposal also provides for appeals to Congress in case the President thinks special legislation is necessary, but, of course, he has this right in any circumstances. There is a notable advantage, as we have previously pointed out, in giving the President a double-barreled weapon against work stoppages that threaten to cripple our national economy. The injunction, as applied under the T-H Act, permits him to strike only at recalcitrant labor. Power to seize plants and operate them temporarily would enable him also to strike at recalcitrant management. The very existence of this dual power would be a strong deterrent to industrial paralysis.

The chief question that is likely to be raised is whether the President should be required to go to a court for authorization to seize and operate struck plants. Senators Taft, Smith and Donnell are seeking to safeguard this far-reaching power against abuse. Before the President could take over a plant, under their proposal, he would have to prove to the courts that the strike or threatened strike would affect a substantial part of an entire industry and would imperil the national health or safety. The inevitable effect would be to substitute the judgment of the court for that of the President, and it does not seem to us the function of the courts to exercise judgment in this particular sphere.

There is good reason for going to the courts, in case of national emergency for injunctions against strikers; the power of the courts is needed to make the injunction effective and to punish those who violate it. Similarly injunctions might well be authorized against lockouts causing a national emergency. It is quite a different matter to require court permission before the President may exercise his discretion as to whether an emergency justifies the seizure of a struck plant. In our opinion, a better method would be to authorize, in cases of this sort, direct presidential seizure of struck plants, with or without a request for an injunction against the strikers. An injunction might then be sought to restrain the employer from interference with temporary Government operation of his plant. In any event, the period of seizure would last for only 60 days or less. That restriction plus the weight of public opinion would act as powerful safeguards against injustice to either employes or employers.

The Tepid War

The Russians, whose plans for gaining control of the whole of Berlin were frustrated by one of the most magnificent feats in the history of military aviation, have now reverted to their favorite tactics of conciliation followed by nuisance and provocation. On Wednesday, the Russians (who, through a lamentable absence of foresight on the part of the Potsdam conferees, have control of the Helmstedt-Berlin highway, the principal approach to the capital from western Germany) suddenly, and with no warning, reimposed the blockade. This time the pretext was a technical one. The Soviet military government, acting beyond doubt on instructions from Moscow, announced that the order rescinding the blockade applied only to British, French and American convoys and not to German transport. German truck drivers whose vehicles were laden with highly perishable food supplies were halted and informed that their papers did not authorize them to use the highway. However, the movement of trucks using other routes into Berlin was apparently not interfered with.

Thus the cold war has been succeeded by a tepid war, as Secretary Acheson virtually said on the eve of his departure for Paris. The purpose of the new quasi-blockade, or "little blockade," as it has been called, is not to prevent supplies from reaching Berlin, but merely to make difficulties and complications for their own sake. The plan is a variation of the one long followed in the diplomatic field by Mr. Molotov, and with considerable success. At the various conferences which followed the victory, Mr. Molotov's practice was to interpose all manner of difficulties, obstacles and delays in matters in which the Soviet government had no conceivable interest. When he deemed that he had sufficiently exacerbated the patience of the other conferees, Mr. Molotov would offer to withdraw his objections in return for a concession on some matter of great concern to him. That Mr. Acheson is familiar with the technique and is prepared to cope with it is indicated by his preconference statement.

Implementing Hoover

The Senate has responded promptly and constructively to President Truman's plea for authority to carry out recommendations of the Hoover Commission. The drawback is the decision that either house of Congress acting alone may veto action proposed by the President. A good compromise would be for Senate conferees to knock out this one-house veto in return for elimination of the indefensible exemptions from reorganization written in by the House. That this is unlikely, however, is indicated by Senator McClellan's pledge not to yield on the veto. If the power of a single house to upset the program is retained, the premium then will be on congressional leadership to avoid the kind of petty obstructionism that could frustrate the President's efforts.

Whatever the ultimate result on the veto, we hope that conferees will succeed in overriding the exemptions voted by the House. Some of the agencies most in need of overhauling, such as the Army Engineers, are included in these exemptions. It would set a bad example for the remainder of the Hoover program if a few projects which are favorite areas for pork barreling were left immune. It is encouraging, in this respect, that the new Citizens' Committee for Reorganization of the Executive Branch of the Government is now organized in 17 States. Despite its cumbersome title, this group has an important function in mobilizing popular support for changes and counteracting the pressure that is sure to come from the agencies affected.

Senator McClellan estimates that under the present bill the President will have authority to execute 25 per cent of the Hoover recommendations and that 40 per cent more can be carried out administratively. This may be true numerically, but it is not necessarily an accurate picture of the problem. Some of the most important reforms, such as the revision of budget and accounting procedures, civil service regulations, medical services and procurement, are in the remaining one third of the recommendations requiring legislation. Thus it is imperative that Congress continue to play its part with statutory changes such as already approved for the State Department and started for the Department of Defense.

Beyond this, the President now has a clear mandate to proceed with the consolidation and streamlining suggested by the Hoover Commission. The commission's recommendations, of course, are not sacrosanct, and in a few instances we believe the commission went badly astray. But the majority of the suggestions are sound, and there can be no excuse either for lassitude or for additional studies that could delay changes indefinitely.

Test Of The B-36

A generation ago Gen. "Billy" Mitchell made history by demonstrating that airplanes could sink a battleship. Today the tables are turned, with the Navy challenging the Air Force to defend its B-36 bomber against naval jet fighter planes. The suggestion that there be a test of the ability of fighters to intercept the supposedly invincible intercontinental bomber now has been taken up by the House Armed Services Committee in the form of a request to Defense Secretary Johnson. Admittedly there would be many difficulties in establishing ground rules for such a test, and the results probably would be more indicative than conclusive, but we think, nevertheless, the trial ought to be made.

Much of the B-36's claim to invincibility arises from its ability to fly at 40,000 feet—an altitude at which most fighter planes lose maneuverability. On this fact is based the contention that the B-36 could bomb a distant enemy without fear of interception. But the Navy maintains that its F2H jet fighter can climb to 40,000 feet in seven minutes, and that its broad-swing design makes it able to sustain speed at high altitudes. The relative merit of these claims is not something that can be settled by a publicity war, but it is a question of importance to the American people.

If the B-36 is to be a cardinal instrument of Air Force strategy, before too much reliance is placed on a single weapon, it ought to be subjected to the most exhaustive tests, including its ability to ward off attackers as well as its ability to hit targets from 40,000 feet. The real importance of such trials is not to fan the flames of service rivalry, but to show the necessity for making the best use of all available defense implements.

McCarran On Spain

During the past few days The Washington Post has contained the pro-Franco statements of Senator McCarran, as well as the excellent anti-Franco cartoons of Herblock (May 6 and 12), Walter Lippmann's penetrating analysis ("Franco and Defeatism," May 12) and the honest and courageous editorial, "Spain: The Test," May 13.

I am not going to debate with Senator McCarran at this time. But maybe he can explain the terrible black markets which exist in Spain, 10 years after the civil war. The black market is the worst in the world, has caused untold suffering, and has created a nouveau riche class in Franco Spain.

Or perhaps he can shed light on what has happened to those many people who have been arrested and imprisoned by the Franco government for objecting to the regime. Or maybe he would care to comment on freedom of religion in Spain. He must know, for example, that the Masons have been denounced as enemies of Franco Spain. (Franco's speech, Madrid, April 1.)

And what does he have to say about the sumptuous style in which Franco and his followers have set themselves up at the expense of pitifully starving Spaniards? Most telling of all, what does Senator McCarran have to say about the dollar bank balances which Franco has accumulated in various countries abroad to the account of various of his followers?

You can be assured that your excellent articles, editorials and cartoons on Franco Spain will not be reprinted in Spain. But I am sure that Senator McCarran's statement and other pro-Franco remarks will be given nation-wide dissemination throughout the Spanish press. The Communist press throughout the world will also see that Senator McCarran's and other pro-Franco statements are given the broadest possible circulation. The Communists know very well that such statements are more damaging to the cause of democracy in the world than a Red army putsch. SPANIARD.

"Government Of Clerks"

I wish to emphatically refute the statement of Mr. Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, in his letter of May 17 when he says that the U. S. Government is not being run by "clerks." If Mr. Mitchell will come down out of his ivory tower he will not only find that it is being run by clerks, but by completely uneducated ones.

In one small division alone, consisting of about 50 people, there are seven chief clerks, drawing salaries from $3500 to $3727 a year, whose only job is to check in the mail, deliver it to several rooms and check it out. A few officers with the rank of captain in the division barely get that much a year for answering those letters.

The chief clerks then have a chief who gets $5200 for keeping the other clerks in their jobs and putting his final stamp of approval on all the letters, none of which is important enough for more than one person to handle. Nobody can touch these people. They were all certified as CAF-2's, and none of them ever saw the inside of a college, including the one who draws $5200.

How are you going to get the best people, when a clerk who passes a CAF-2 job, spends half his time playing up to the clerks above him, and finally moves up to a job which only outsiders with a master's degree can even compete for? JUSTICE.

Alabama Realities

As a native Alabamian who visited that State at the same time as did Mr. Drew Pearson, I wish to correct a few impressions that he may have made in his May 10 column on "Alabama Negroes Forge Ahead." First, the salaries of Negro and white teachers are not equal in Alabama; this is true in only a few counties. Second, Alabama State Teachers' College for Negroes is not even comparable to the University of Alabama, to say nothing of being equal (keep in mind that it is supposed to be the "State University" for Negroes). Finally, too many shanties, huts, dilapidated cabins, and churches remain as the only schools that many Alabama Negroes must attend.

It is a salutary trend when reporters and writers give publicity to the good that is done in the South in the field of race relations. But reporters should not allow their enthusiasm, gained from tours conducted by community officials through the front yard of a community, to influence them to telescope the good news out of its proper proportion and to leave with the impression that the whole house is in good order.

"Victims Of Neglect"

Your May 18 editorial, "Victims of Neglect," is timely and well put. Twenty-nine deaths in 34 days in the Old People's Home at Fort Wayne, Ind., certainly calls for a thorough, honest investigation into the manner in which old people are treated.

The general public fully believes that the old folks confined in these homes are well taken care of, and given what the State provides, and often the State provides the best; that the men and women in charge are good, merciful and godly people, that the inmates live in happy surroundings and that no harm could possibly befall them.

Is it not time to do something better than to have concentration camps in this country where old folks are starved to death?

Untidy Washington

As a newcomer to Washington I have been amazed at the untidiness of the city streets and parks.

Is Washington unable to maintain adequate street cleaners to keep the Nation's Capital clean as an example to the many visitors who throng the streets, or is it due to the lack of civic consciousness on the part of the dwellers in this untidy but otherwise beautiful city?

Food-Drug Administration Powers

Mr. Edward Brown Williams has mailed me a reprint from the Congressional Record of April 8 reproducing his letter you published March 30. This apparently took issue with one of your editorials which supported the recommendations of the Hoover Commission that the functions of the Food and Drug Administration relating to foods be transferred to the Department of Agriculture, and that those relating to drugs be transferred to the Health Bureau of a proposed new United Medical Administration.

I have not formed my opinion regarding the Hoover recommendations for dividing the present responsibilities of the Food and Drug Administration, but I do think that the Food and Drug Administration has entirely too much power, which for the reasonable protection of the industries regulated against administrative error and abuses should be much more carefully limited and defined.

I take great exception to the accuracy of one statement made in Mr. Williams' letter to you, which I quote:

"The administration has, moreover, achieved the highest order of respect among the industries subject to its regulatory jurisdiction. The responsible majority of them regard it as a safeguard for their own high standards and reputations against the marginal violators of the law, who sooner or later are taken into camp by the administration and either converted to the faith, or, if they are recalcitrant, are put out of business."

My exceptions are: The majority of cereal millers do not agree that the Food and Drug Administration has achieved the highest order of respect among the industries regulated; or (b) hold that those who hold such opinion are the only responsible units of the industries affected; or (c) regard the activities of the Food and Drug Administration as a safeguard against the marginal violators of the law.

Too many cereal millers of highest integrity and purpose who were "totally devoid of evil intent or consciousness of wrongdoing" have been criminally prosecuted, and too many seizures have been made where the contamination was infinitesimal in the extreme, and too much waste of wholesome foods has thus been suffered for cereal millers to share the views Mr. Williams expresses for them.

On the contrary, I believe that the majority of cereal millers and small food processors who are striving earnestly, unceasingly, and capably to reach the unattainable perfection required by this act, share my feeling "that whenever an administrator, under law has power at his will to criminally charge, convict, and probably penalize, even those totally devoid of evil intent or consciousness of wrongdoing," and when that administrator vigorously fights to retain such unconstitutional power; then great benefits may accrue to those who support the administration's unholy position, and conversely, great potential risks are assumed by those who have the courage to oppose them. When a Government bureau has the power to put out of business any industry regulated by it, the exercise of such power, or even the possession of it, is certainly not "the due process of law" guaranteed by the Constitution.

Therefore, should it appear necessary in order to apply some reasonable restriction on the broad scope, wide discretion, and absolute powers of this administration, I should not hesitate to advocate carrying out the recommendations of the Hoover Commission.

Child Pawns Of Politics

By Malvina Lindsay

Archaic Courts

FIFTY YEARS ago this spring the first juvenile court of this country was established in Chicago. But celebration of the progress made since then in helping children who get into trouble has one fly in the ointment. Judges of juvenile courts are still being appointed widely on a political, or at best a legalistic basis.

This was a great surprise to Mrs. Dermot Morrah, British juvenile court judge and social worker, who recently completed a four-month tour studying the American juvenile court system. Her findings have special meaning for Washington, where one, or possibly two, judges will soon be chosen to take over the work of Judge Fay Bentley, now ill.

Chief qualification of a juvenile judge, maintains Mrs. Morrah (as well as most other juvenile authorities), should be an understanding of children. For children's offenses are problems of behavior rather than law. In England 90 per cent of juvenile sentences are passed by lay magistrates, who include social workers, teachers, doctors, and who serve on a volunteer basis.

The great variance in the way juvenile judges in this country handled children also surprised Mrs. Morrah. Some made a basic approach through the child's emotions, home and neighborhood background. Yet in one court a judge kept saying to each child, "I'd give you the belt if I could."

POLITICAL judges and narrowly legalistic ones sitting in juvenile courts are usually excellent examples of bulls in china shops. This writer saw many such in action when as a reporter she covered juvenile courts. In one city the circuit court judges, politically elected lawyers, rotated sitting in juvenile courts and all but one dreaded the assignment and showed their boredom when they got it. Sentences ranged from the extremes of sentimentality to that of severity.

Finally the judge who developed a real interest in the work got the job permanently. Though having no knowledge of child psychology, of sociology or the elemental principles of pedagogy, he did have a liking for children. Drilled in the old-fashioned discipline, he gave stern lectures to every child on the value of telling the truth and of going to Sunday school. And he often gave angry bawlings-out to parents in the presence of their embarrassed children. But on the whole he did a good job, and was a great improvement on what had gone before.

Many unqualified judges are still sitting in juvenile courts, as was evidenced by the recent wave of sentencing of fathers and even mothers to jail for their children's delinquency. One of the fictions this country clings to about juvenile delinquency, says Dr. George E. Gardner, executive director of the Judge Baker Guidance Center of Boston, is that the best person to prescribe treatment for offenders is someone trained in law. And that despite all we know of human behavior, psychiatry and anthropology.

WASHINGTON however can be proud of the way in which Judge Bentley during her 15 years in the juvenile court changed the court from a tribunal to mete out punishment to children to a social institution, including a guidance center, which sought to understand and cope basically with child behavior problems. Only the rush of business—too many cases for the overworked personnel—prevented the court from meeting its aims.

Judge Bentley was well prepared for her job. Early in life she had been fired with the ambition to become a juvenile court judge, and she prepared to this end, training herself in social work as well as law.

A reward for political services should not be gained at the expense of children, say those who are trying to get political pressure removed from the juvenile court. Another goal of those trying to better the juvenile court system is to get higher standards and salaries for staff members of the courts. Still another aim is to have the power and activities of juvenile courts extended so these can deal more effectively with situations in the homes and community that lie back of the behavior of emotionally disturbed children.

Attacking Slums

I heartily agree with Mr. Wilbert Dubin's May 17 letter regarding slums. I do not believe that the people who live there are wholly responsible for such conditions or that they choose to live there. If we white people expect the colored people to be good citizens, we should first use our influence to give them equality in providing employment, so they will be able to pay rent on decent buildings.

Washington will better deserve the admiration of other nations if it will remove the slums before the celebration of the sesquicentennial next year. I think if Abraham Lincoln were living in the White House today, he would not be silent on the race question. I like to think of the person who once said there is only one race—the human race.

Labor Statistics As A Propaganda Weapon

By E. B. Mittelman

Economist, International Association of Machinists

IN A pamphlet of some 142 pages, called The Gift of Freedom, the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics has recently added its voice to a number of other voices already beamed to all parts of the world, describing how democracy works in America.

The bureau's emphasis is on how democracy works among working people. This emphasis should be of particular interest in western Europe, where the workers, some of them now in high places, and having had some experience with fascism and communism, as well as with democracy, are now casting about for a fresh start. This emphasis should also be reassuring to the American workers who, amidst the inherent uncertainties of their own system, are sometimes inclined to doubt its merits. The pamphlet shows that, in the long-run, the system has brought them a considerable amount of well being.

The only unfortunate thing about the story is that, having a good story to tell, the bureau could not overcome the temptation to make it too good; or else, telling it at a time when all sorts of ideologies are jostling for position, could not overcome the temptation to stretch it a bit. This is bad form in any event, but put statistically it is glaringly bad.

TAKE the treatment of the American standard of living. Though modest enough as seen at home, the American standard has always been legendary. The bureau spells it out in goods and services and then claims that, while it is not available to all families, it is available to "more than three fourths" of the families. But in making such a claim it flies in the face of the facts and spoils what is otherwise still a bright picture; 60 per cent would be more nearly correct.

Not satisfied with that, the bureau goes on to show that the standard doubled between 1909 and 1947. In the first place, there are no figures on earnings or living costs to make any such showing. What the bureau does is to take the record on weekly factory earnings available in 1909 for the sweated industries of the time, mostly textiles and needle trades, and the record on 15 food items available in 1909, and relate them to the more representative figures for 1947.

After thoroughly kneading the 1909 figures, the bureau finds that average weekly earnings then amounted to $9.84 a week, and that the cost of living, with 1935-1939 as base, stood at 64. Weekly earnings of factory workers, in 1947, amounted to $49.25; and the cost of living index stood at 159.2. This means that earnings went up about five times, while the cost of living went up only about 2½ times.

Representative of the sweated trades, $9.84 a week is, of course, ridiculously low. In a survey of the cost of living in the United States made by the British Board of Trade in 1909, as one of a number of surveys of different countries in the Atlantic area, for purposes of comparison with its own, the board, in 28 cities, found that mechanics in the metal trades were then earning $16.73 to $22.30 a week, iron molders $16.73 to $19.77; machinists, identified as turners and fitters, $15.41 to $18.13; blacksmith, $16.47 to $20.76; pattern makers, $18.13 to $22.30. But the board also found that common laborers then earned $9.12 to $10.65 a week. This shows how unrepresentative the bureau's figures on earnings for 1909 really is.

The metal trades are much more diluted now with semi-skilled help than they were in 1909; there is, therefore, no way of comparing the figures given for 1909 with the $51.40 all workers making electrical machinery earned in 1947, and the $55.88 all workers making all other types of machinery earned in 1947. But skilled machinists in all kinds of industries averaged about $62.40 in 1947. Taking the mid point of the earnings of the 1909 machinists as $16.77, this means that the 1947 machinists improved their earnings about 3.7 times. But since the cost of living went up 2½ times, the real increase is only about 49 per cent, instead of the 100 per cent claimed by the bureau.

WELL, 49 per cent is not bad. Why should the bureau want to make it a 100 per cent? Interestingly enough, in the needle trades, average weekly earnings amounted to $37.29 a week in 1947, and in textiles to $40.94, compared with the $9.84 given by the bureau for all industries, but really representing mainly these two particular industries. If so, then the textile workers improved their earnings about 4.2 and the needle trade workers gained 67 per cent in real earnings, and the needle trade workers about 52 per cent. Thus the textile workers made the greatest progress, but still far from 100 per cent; machinists, even if substantial, the least.

There is one other way of getting a check on this point. In 1907 the New York State Conference of Charities and Correction, in cooperation with the Russell Sage Foundation and Columbia University, made a study of "the essentials and the cost of a normal standard of living" in New York City. Conditions in 1909 could not have changed so much as to spoil the 1907 results for further use in 1909 as a point of departure for more recent years.

The study, as is indicated by the fact that 80 persons were employed on it, was done in great detail. Only families having 2 to 4 children under 16 years of age, and having incomes of $500 to $1000 a year were covered. The lower end of the income limit, incidentally, shows how far off the bureau is in assuming average weekly earnings for 1909 as $9.84. Allowing the usual two weeks for incidental time out, $9.84 a week is only $492 a year.

The families were pretty well distributed occupationally and according to nationalities. The study concluded that "An examination of the items of the budget shows that the families having from $900 to $1000 a year are able, in general, to get food enough to keep soul and body together, and clothing and shelter enough to meet the most urgent demands of decency."

IN 1947 the Bureau of Labor Statistics, working with a committee made up of representatives from the Department of Agriculture, some educational institutions, management and labor, developed what, it thought, was a minimum budget for a family of four, including two children under 15. "This is not," the bureau said, "a 'subsistence' budget, nor is it a 'luxury' budget; it is an attempt to describe and measure a modest but adequate American standard of living." In June 1947 this budget cost $3347 in New York.

There is no way of knowing whether the 1909 budget and 1947 budget are comparable. While $900 to $1000 were considered enough in 1909 to keep a family in health and decency, $800 to $900 were considered questionable. While it is hard to get any agreement on what the 1947 budget means, nor even to be sure in one's own mind, the bureau was also probably striving for a "necessary minimum" for health and decency.

The representative committee working with the bureau characterized the 1947 budget as "the necessary minimum with respect to items included and their quantities as determined by prevailing standards of what is needed for health, efficiency, nurture of children, social participation and the maintenance of self-respect and the respect of others." If the 1947 budget is anything like the 1909, at the $1000 level, then it cost the average worker 3.3 times as much to live in New York in 1947 as it did in 1909.

If so, and assuming the change in New York is applicable to the Nation as a whole, even if the beginning and end costs were different, the gains previously noted for machinists, as representative of the skilled trades, and the gains of the textile workers, and needle trade workers, as representative of the once sweated and low-paid industries, are considerably reduced.

At a 3.3 increase in the cost of living, the machinists with their 3.7 gain in wages, show a net increase of 12 per cent, the textile workers with their 4.2 gain in wages, 26 per cent; and the needle trade workers with their 3.8 gain wages, 15 per cent. The hidden gain, of course, common to all the workers, not evident in figures on weekly earning, is that all of them got the gain in earnings in spite of a substantial reduction in hours, from 54 and 60 hours down to 40.

BUT EVEN these modest gains are nothing to be ashamed of, considering the level from which they were made. The $900 to $1000, referred to as the cost of living in New York in 1909, seem modest enough, but in summarizing its study on the cost of living in the United States at the time, the British Board of Trade noted that, while the American workingman's family ate only about 8¼ pounds of bread a week, against 22 pounds eaten by the British family, the American family spent three times as much on rolls, cakes and biscuit...

It also noted that the consumption of meat was much larger, and to a certain extent vegetables. Finally the board said, "The budgets indicate, in general, that the dietary of American working-class families is more liberal and varied than that of corresponding families in the United Kingdom."

More important than the gains over the years, whatever they may be, is whether the workers are now earning enough to meet the cost of a decent standard of living, as currently understood. Here, too, as already indicated, the Bureau of Labor Statistics overshoots the mark. On page 35 of The Gift of Freedom, it says "that more than three fourths of the city families are able to maintain the standards of living described in the budget," presumably the budget for four-person urban families. Instead of discussing the 1947 figures on this issue it, for some reason, switches to 1946 figures. The 1946 budget for a family of four ran from $2532 to $2985 in 34 cities. The weighted average for all the cities was $2776. The best available evidence on the income of four-person urban families comes from the Bureau of the Census. On the basis of this evidence only 60 per cent of such families had enough income to meet the budget.

Considering that the Nation had just gone through a world war, and was confronted with shortages at home, and distress abroad, even this is not bad. It only shows more accurately how far the Nation must go to bring all of its people up to a decent living.

The advertising agencies of this country have never been known for their modesty. But in advising individual firms on their advertising programs abroad, the Advertising Council cautions against overstatements. The best thing, perhaps, is to be as accurate as possible, certainly not to magnify one set of facts at home and another abroad.

Experts at Meetings Here Shape U. S. Commerce Code

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

A proposed Uniform Commercial Code for the Nation, embodied now in a 765-page volume that has taken almost five years to prepare, has been the principal business of the American Law Institute and the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform Laws here this week.

The 500 jurists, attorneys and law professors in joint meeting with the commissioners have spent the past three days of their session at the Mayflower Hotel, which closes today discussing the almost final draft document.

The code would revise, bring up to date and codify the laws of the 48 States and the Federal Government governing commercial transactions, as modified and interpreted by thousands of decisions of the Supreme Courts of the States and the United States.

Single Subject Concept

As drafted, the model statute is based on the concept that "commercial transactions" make a single subject of the law. The code is therefore designed to apply to every major phase of such transactions, from sale to final payment.

The "single subject" concept is in contrast with the six different uniform laws, each pertaining to a separate phase of commercial transactions, that now regulate most commerce.

Drawn up by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform Laws, the first of the existing statutes, that on negotiable instruments, was submitted to the States in 1896. The last of the six, on trade receipts, was submitted in 1933.

Two of the uniform statutes have been adopted by every State, while the others have been widely but not unanimously accepted.

The Uniform Commercial Code includes sections covering contracts, sales, checks, drafts and letters of credit, credit security, bills of lading and warehouse receipts, bank collections, transfers of stocks and bonds and all other phases of commercial transactions.

Goodrich Heads Board

The drafting and editorial work is in the charge of a board headed by United States Circuit Court Judge Herbert F. Goodrich of Philadelphia. Other members are Prof. Karl N. Llewellyn of Columbia University Law School, who is editor in chief of the code; John C. Pryor of Burlington, Iowa; William A. Schnader of Philadelphia, and Harrison Tweed of New York, new president of the Law Institute. Soia Mentschikoff of New York is associate editor in chief.

Final consideration of the proposed code is scheduled for a special meeting September 2 and 3 in St. Louis. If approved then, it will be submitted to State legislatures through the State bar associations.

The project has been financed by a grant of the Maurice and Laura Falk Foundation of Pittsburgh, supplemented by contributions from the Beaumont Foundation of Cleveland and from 98 business, financial and law firms.

U. N. Nations Urged to Form Own Human Rights Groups

Benjamin V. Cohen, United States representative to the United Nations, last night urged that member countries create "national human rights commissions" as a system of "self-policing."

Formation of such commissions would be helpful he said, to the United Nations and the carrying out of its own Declaration of Human Rights.

Cohen spoke at a dinner meeting at the Mayflower Hotel of the twenty-sixth annual session of the American Law Institute, which will conclude here today.

He said that the declaration is not perfect. "The significant thing about it," he declared, "is that it is the beginning of man's efforts on an international basis to promote human freedom."

National human rights commissions, Cohen said, would act as a "system of self-policing." They would serve to "awaken the conscience of men and women all over the world," he said.

"To be effective, the Declaration of Human Rights must command the willing allegiance of all mankind," he declared.

"If we can by education and progressive measures make the declaration mean something, it will be difficult to exaggerate its effect upon the growth of tolerance and the understanding of differences."

Cohen praised the law institute for drafting a proposed international bill of rights. The institute's work, he said, proved "very helpful" to the State Department in obtaining incorporation of principles of human rights into the United Nations Charter.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

The Press On Trial

WITH SOME tardiness the press has taken recognition of a pretty mean situation. The facts uncovered in Illinois, showing a number of publishers and editors carried on the State pay roll under the Green Republican machine, are a black eye for an institution that must depend on public acceptance for prestige and influence.

Childs

If it had not been for the initiative and persistence of two hard-hitting newspapers — the Chicago Daily News and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch—these facts would perhaps never have come to light. That is a fact to put alongside the scandal of editors, theoretically responsible for independent judgment, accepting pay from a corrupt political administration.

No amount of explaining by former Gov. Dwight H. Green or anyone else can make this look like anything but what it is —a shocking breach of trust. While I am frankly willing to admit prejudice in favor of the press, it is my conviction that what went on in Illinois, and to a lesser degree in Albany, N. Y., is an exception to the rule of integrity.

I would like to point to an example that in my opinion is far more typical. It is the example of a man who gave a lifetime to the creation of a courageous and successful newspaper.

HAROLD B. JOHNSON, editor and publisher of the Watertown (N. Y.) Times, died the other day in that up-State community where for so long he had played such an important role. His life could serve as a kind of monument to the meaning of a free press in a free world.

Though his whole career was in the quiet town that is now in the first fresh green of unfolding elms and maples, it certainly was not without drama. It was drama of both a personal and public nature such as makes the contrivances of Hollywood look pale and thin.

Working hard from his first cub days, Johnson in early life was able to begin to buy stock in the Times. He was gradually able to acquire the controlling interest in the paper. But this did not, as it so often does, turn him into a timid conservative.

One of his convictions was on publicly owned power. He believed that a public monopoly would bring lower rates and just as good service as a private monopoly. Johnson waged a vigorous, unflinching campaign for a municipally owned power plant for Watertown.

He won that fight and at the same time he won the enmity of powerful private-utility interests. One of the enemies Johnson made was the late Floyd L. Carlisle, utility tycoon.

Carlisle, born and brought up in Watertown, had gone to New York City to become chairman of the board of the Niagara Hudson Power Co. and Consolidated Edison. Under Carlisle's direction the utilities acquired control of the rival paper, the Watertown Standard. They had an additional advantage in their control of important newsprint interests.

SO THE fight began. On the one side was the editor who had stayed in his own community to build up a newspaper in which he believed. On the other side was the hometown boy who had gone to the city and there carved out an empire of money and power.

The utilities sent in high-priced editors to staff the Standard. But it was evident fairly early that they could not supply what Johnson had spent years in creating—the confidence of a community.

Carlisle had power but not influence. That is an important difference which men of great wealth sometimes never understand.

Shortly before the crash of 1929, the utilities gave up in disgust and sold the Standard to Johnson. Accepting the challege of only one newspaper in the town, he worked constantly to try to insure that the Times was not narrow or prejudiced. He printed opinion and interpretation widely differing from the editorial views of the paper.

While it became more and more successful financially, Johnson never lost sight of the fact that he was a newsman responsible for continuously expanding the horizon of the news. You did not have to be in that community very long to understand what a force this editor had been through the years.

This is what we call success in America. But for those who work in and have a deep affection for the institution of the press, I think it's important to note that it is a lot more than financial success. That was essential. But without the other things that Johnson gave to the community it would have counted for no more than commercial success in any line of business.

Truman Asked To Cut Budget

dignified sound," continued Douglas, "but when the new wrapping is peeled off I have a very real feeling that however succulent the slices it is still the same old balogna."

McKellar accused Douglas of an attack on the Appropriations Committee and on the President himself, since the bill is slightly under the President's figures. He read testimony from committee hearings showing Douglas appeared before the group in support of Illinois projects. He said Douglas was "trying to fix himself up in his own State . . . before the committee he was one man, before the Senate he's another man."

Douglas said he had fulfilled his obligation to local constituents by appearing before the committee and had an obligation to speak out on the floor "in the general interest." He said McKellar was implying that every Senator "who gets a slice" out of the bill shouldn't oppose it.

The Illinoisian said he had never criticized the President and was not attributing anything "improper" to the Appropriations Committee. He conceded there were meritorious projects in the bill but said many of these could be put to better use in a period of depression.

"There are huge quantities of fat in this bill," he concluded. "Let us build a hot fire and fry out 300 millions of the fat."

Surplus Grain Use for Motor Fuel Is Urged

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

An Agriculture Department chemist yesterday urged that the Nation's surplus corn and wheat be used to run its trucks, tractors and automobiles.

Dr. G. E. Hilbert of the Government's experimental laboratories at Peoria, Ill., said his force has had great success mixing alcohol with gasoline—legitimately.

There are two proper ways to do it, he said. One would be to make an alky-gasoline blend, about 10 per cent alcohol and 90 per cent gasoline. But a better method, he said, is to use an auxiliary carburetor with a 1-gallon tank filled with a mixture of alcohol and gasoline. This extra carburetor would inject the alcohol into the gasoline in small amounts when the engine was under strain.

One gallon of alcohol, he said, mixed with 50 to 60 gallons of gasoline gives "extra antiknock power just at the instant of need."

Experiments have been made with trucks over nearly 1000 miles between Peoria and Memphis, Tenn., Hilbert reported. The chief advantage of the mixture, he told a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa), would be to cut down the use of high-octane gasoline. Such gasoline, containing tetra-ethyl lead, now consumes about 8 per cent of the Nation's "irreplaceable lead production."

Health Plan Called Only Way To Stop Socialized Medicine

J. Donald Kingsley, Acting Federal Security administrator, yesterday said the alternative to the Administration's health insurance program was to risk socialized medicine.

Kingsley told a House Commerce Subcommittee that the Administration plan, rather than bringing socialized medicine, would prevent it.

'This Administration,' declared the witness, "is not offering a plan for socialized medicine. It does not want socialized medicine. It is, in fact, offering national health insurance as the only safe and certain way to avoid socialized medicine."

There was "much evidence," he added, to indicate "that an adequate system of social insurance is one of the surest ways to avoid socialism." He cited Great Britain as an example.

Kingsley said the British entered the field of national health laws in 1911 with "a half-way compromise." If the 1911 system had been adequate instead of a compromise, he contended, Britain would not have come to the socialized medicine it recently adopted.

Other witnesses yesterday were Representatives Dingell (D., Mich.) and Beimiller (D., Wis.), sponsors of the Administration bill. They censured the American Medical Association for lobbying against the program.

Beimiller said the AMA was conducting "one of the most high-powered lobby campaigns Congress has ever been up against."

Dingell described it as "cold-blooded lobbying" by "political doctors" and "the slickest thing ever conceived to befuddle the people and Congress." He said it would be investigated if the Senate approves an investigation of lobbying already approved by the House.

"The coldly premeditated and deliberately slanderous term of socialized medicine is being applied to health insurance," Dingell said. "We have repeatedly said there is nothing provided for but health insurance.

"Those whispering scandal into the dying ears of their patients instead of ministering to them, I'll take in my stride."

Dingell said he figured a payroll tax of 1½ per cent on employers and employes would raise four to five billion dollars a year.

One on the Aisle—

M-G-M Insists On Fresh Lions

By Richard L. Coe

TUESDAY NEXT is the twenty-fifth birthday of Leo, the Lion, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Leo's backer, is in the midst of massive celebrations.

The Coolidges were in the White House when the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, Metro Pictures and Louis B. Mayer linked forces. The Goldwyn name comes from fabulous Sam, but he had nothing to do with the merger; two years before he waived all interest in his plant, and when he went on to make his own films, he had to dig up a new firm name—Samuel Goldwyn Productions.

Metro supplied pictures with stars that included Nazimova, Viola Dana and Bert Lytell for Loew's Theaters. The Mayer studio had been doing the same, but to keep his houses filled, Marcus Loew bought up both companies and took over the Goldwyn studio as physical headquarters.

Thus arose the thumping empire whose pictures this year have come to you with "A twenty-fifth aniversary presentation" stamped over the credits. One of this season's pride and joys of M-G-M is "The Barkleys of Broadway," with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, now at the Capitol. Another top one, "The Stratton Story," with Jimmy Stewart as the peg-leg pitcher, arrives next week at the Palace.

All these facts and virtually thousands more come from drums briskly thumped by Metro's publicist, Howard Dietz, who's written songs and produced hit and stage musicals in his spare time. Howard and his Gotham lieutenants, Ernie Emerling and Dan Terrell, once of F st., have whipped up a silver cover for their "Movie News Letter" this week, for which, by the way, he asked the Nation's paid moviegoers what they were doing 25 years ago. Their answers range from Ward Marsh of the Cleveland Plain-Dealer calling for his "c-r-r-utch" to some lads and lassies who hadn't yet been born.

Howard's Lion Lasts

But Howard's most lasting inspiration has been the Leo trademark. He says that now it's the great-grandson of the original Leo who poses for the M-G-M trademark, which gives you an idea of the company's largesse.

Until Howard tossed in that statistic, I'd always thought that the "Ars Gratia Artis" lion was the same old Leo, never dreaming that even the seal was kept up to date. Somehow, it makes me feel I've been underrating the studio's budget. Think of having to keep a lion in meat just for a trademark. Since this is the fourth in line, you can see the chow's been okay.

Brightest thing that's happened to Leo the Lion this year seems to have been the hiring by Big Boss Louis B. Mayed of No. 2 Boss, Dore Schary.

Dore "I-Used-To-Be-a-Newspaperman-Myself-Once" Schary is quite a guy. Metro's gain was RKO's loss, for his forte lies in making good films on a modest budget. One of his last for RKO was "The Window," which should have lasted longer at Keith's and probably would have if Schary's new outfit were not celebrating with two top pictures at its big F st. palazzos.

"The Window" cost about $600,000, which is a million bucks less than the budget for an average M-G-M feature. But Louis B. probably would be the first to admit that, as a movie, "The Window" is one of this year's best chillers.

Stars Vs. Low Budget

What defeated "The Window" as a box office draw against such folk as Astaire, Rogers and Clifton Webb may well have been its lack of a star. The players have good reputations, but not even Arthur Kennedy ever has been a star.

And the star system for 25 years has been M-G-M's especial gimmick. (Remember that ad which still crops up: "More stars than there are in heaven"?). Just how Dore and his modest, non-star budget will make out in a studio long geared to stars, stars, stars will be something to watch.

Even Paramount is contributing to Leo's silver anniversary. The "If-It's-a - Paramount - Picture-It's-the - Best - Show - in-Town" people have sent over their bouncing Betty Hutton to replace Leo's Judy Garland in the title role of "Annie Get Your Gun," out of which Judy stalked in a fit of temper the other day.

'Course, they're not doing it for free, but still, for Metro, it's a nice birthday present.

TODAY: The Hippodrome gets a British comedy from the sleek typewriter of Erence Rattigan with Lilli Palmer, Peggy Cummins and Michael Wilding as stars, "Her Man Gilbey." . . . This is the finale for "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" at the Unnatural National; Mr. Smith's Washington doesn't seem to have cared, and tomorrow he'll be replaced by "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," with Martha Scott and Peggy Ann Garner as Betty Smith's fine people.

THE DINNEEN School of Dancing will present a four-act ballet, "A Mother's Dream," tomorrow night at 8 in the Alexandria Municipal Center. Kathleen Dinneen, the school director, has created the ballet and 15-year-old Peggy Beckwith will have the lead.

THE CIRCUS winds up its stay tonight.

New Hearing Tests Urged

Hopkins, Dr. Hardy reported "an average of two children each week, diagnosed as feeble-minded, were found to have nothing wrong but hearing impairment."

All the children, he later told reporters, were "either slated for homes for the feeble-minded or steps in that direction had been started."

Value Pointed Out

Declaring that "objective" hearing tests would "revolutionize audiometry within the next five years," the hearing expert pointed out the "tremendous" value of early diagnosis of hearing loss.

"During the age range of 3 to 6 years the developing child is most highly receptive to language learning and response," he stated.

Dr. Williams told of successes with radon treatment to improve hearing of youngsters who had been referred to their physicians by teachers and parents as "inattentive" or "dull." In many cases, he said, their trouble was found to be impediment of hearing by adenoidal tissues.

Such tissues, often regrowths after surgical removal of the adenoids, are readily obliterated by inserting a probe tipped with a radon-filled vial through the nasal passage to the tissue site.

Now Common Practice

Such treatments, he added, are becoming common practice at clinics such as at Episcopal Hospital and at offices of ear, nose and throat specialists.

At last night's session of the conference, Dr. Aram Glorig, director of the audiology and speech correction center of Walter Reed Hospital, Forest Glen Section, told of the use of the tachistoscope there for "increasing the attention span" of hard-of-hearing patients.

Federal Judge's Impeachment Urged By Davis

In a House speech, Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) said yesterday Federal Judge John Biggs, jr., "should be impeached and removed from office for his decision in a Georgia extradition case.

Biggs wrote a 5-1 majority opinion of the Third Court of Appeals in Philadelphia, which refused Wednesday to let Georgia extradite Leon Johnson, 34-year-old Negro from Pennsylvania. Johnson escaped in 1934 from a Cobb County, Ga., jail, while under a life sentence for murder. The court held that a State cannot extradite a prisoner it has treated "cruelly and inhumanly."

Davis told the House:

"Biggs, in this case, is as guilty of aiding and abetting an escape as any accomplice who ever harbored and gave shelter to a criminal in his home while the sheriff looked for him."

COMPOSITE STAR AND THE REAL THING—The lady at the left looks a bit odd, because she has Jennifer Jones' eyes, Deborah Kerr's nose, Lana Turner's lips, Ava Gardner's bust and Anne Miller's legs. Closest to a composite of these virtues, claims M-G-M, is Ava Gardner, who now will be permitted to go back to work as "The Great Sinner"

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—This happened on the night of April 8, at a party attended by Sir Cedric Hardwicke whose movie, "Connecticut Yankee," had opened the night before. In this film Sir Cedric, playing the role of King Arthur, made his first attempt at singing, in scenes with Bing Crosby. On the night of the party he saw some showpeople open newspapers to the amusement pages, and read some notices aloud: ". . . succeeds brilliantly in his first attempt at both acting and singing" . . . "a remarkable actor who sings magnificiently" . . . "coupling enormous charm and warmth in his debut as an actor-singer" . . . Hardwicke beamed: "A hit, then, isn't it?" . . . "Right," he was told. "Pinza sure was a hit last night in 'South Pacific.'"

Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., spoke to 50,000 people in his district, during his six-week congressional campaign. The new Congressman, incidentally, has only a 2-year lease on his apartment in the district. "That's all I could get, so far," he said.

Ian Hunter, who played the role of the doctor in both the stage and screen versions of "Edward, My Son," was in Sardi's yesterday discussing his summer plans. He will tour the summer stock playhouses in "Call It a Day" . . . Harold Kennedy, producer of the Princeton Playhouse, began to negotiate for Hunter's appearance there. "But why in 'Call It A Day'?" he asked. "It has eight sets" . . . "It seems an ideal vehicle," Hunter told him . . . "In summer stock," replied Kennedy, "an ideal vehicle is one which has only a single set and a few roles—most of which are playable by my partners and me."

Cosmopolitan magazine polled all the members of the Metropolitan Opera company asking them to name their choice for Edward Johnson's successor as manager of the Met. Lawrence Tibbett, in explaining why he and his colleagues couldn't file their answers, said: "It's dangerous to name the one you'd like to be your boss—dangerous, in case somebody else gets the job" . . . The FCC will rule that the editorial ban on broadcasting companies will be maintained—that the operators of stations may not voice their editorial opinions on their own stations . . . Henry Slate, of the Slate Brothers, gave up a profitable vaudeville tour to take the role of Stewport in "South Pacific," at a fraction of his previous salary. "I was tired of working for small people for big money," he told Dick Rodgers. "I want to try working for big people for small money."

Chicago Colleges Seen Cleared of 'Red' Charges

Springfield, Ill., May 20 (AP).—Ending a two-month investigation, an Illinois Legislative Commission today decided not to draw conclusions on whether it found any subversive activities at two Chicago colleges.

The group agreed that its report to the General Assembly will consist of the 300,000-word record of testimony by witnesses. The two schools are the University of Chicago and Roosevelt College, Chicago.

State Senator Paul Broyles of Mount Vernon, head of the Seditious Activities Commission which made the inquiry, said the record "speaks for itself."

Another commission member, Representative Charles Jenkins of Chicago, told newsmen the commission's decision against making recommendations gives the two colleges a "clean bill."

Motorist Sues To Get Cost of Car Bought In '48

A motorist, dissatisfied with a Hudson car he purchased in 1948, yesterday asked District Court to recover for him the purchase price of $3103.

The plaintiff, Sidney Kohn, charged in the suit filed by Attorney Nathan Lubar, that the auto did not "function as represented."

William Manuel, sales manager of the Hudson Motor Car Co. trading as New York Ave. Motor Car Co., 606 New York ave. nw., the company named as a defendant in the suit, said he had given Kohn $1900 trade-in for a 1946 Oldsmobile. He declared further that agents of the Hudson manufacturers had rechecked the auto at issue and found it satisfactory. He said he offered to take the car back and refund the price if Kohn would pay $350 for depreciation.

Also named as defendants are the Hudson Motor Car Co. and the Hudson Sales Corp. of 1513 14th st. nw.

3 Girls Found 2 Days After Swim With Man

Columbia, S. C., May 20 (U.P.)—Three schoolgirls, missing for nearly 48 hours after a swim with a 40-year-old man, turned up today in the Fort Jackson Army reservation.

Some of the girls' wet underclothing had been found in an automobile owned by Jimmy Lee Elgin after he picked them up at Anderson, S. C., Grammar School and took them swimming. The girls are:

Dorothy Redman, 16, and two sisters, Bobbie Jean Ridley, 14, and Marian Ridley, 12.

Red Stallion

Circus Plug Gets Billing At Columbia

"RED STALLION IN THE ROCKIES," an Eagle-Lion release, produced by Aubrey Schenck, directed by Ralph Murphy, screenplay by Tom Reed from a story by Francis Rosenwald. At the Columbia.

THE CAST

Thad Avery ..... Arthur Franz
Talky Carson ..... Wallace Ford
Matthew Simpson ..... Ray Collins
Cindy Smith ..... Jean Heather
Dave Ryder ..... James Davis
Martha Simpson ..... Leatrice Joy
"Dynamite" ..... "The Red Stallion"

"Red Stallion in the Rockies," at the Columbia, is a minor item over which there's no need to go into detail.

Although you might think it's about a horse, the yarn is mainly centered on a circus outfit which goes broke. This puts men out of work as well as a horse, which becomes a ranch phantom and a gunshot target. An innocent girl's grandfather owns the ranch, is a conniver and he's happy to turn the lass out of his house for familiar reasons.

Wallace Ford has little to do as one of the stranded circus men, Leatrice Joy pops up as a grandmother and Jean Heather is the girl.

Director Ralph Murphy and Writer Tom Reed haven't strayed from well-worn bypaths. There's Cinecolor photography and that's about that. R. L. C.

Keep Federal Credit Curbs, Duncan Says

By S. Oliver Goodman

The head of one of the nation's leading finance companies last night advocated the continuance of Governmental credit controls.

Said Alexander E. Duncan, board chairman of the Commercial Credit Co. of Baltimore, in an address here:

"Without Regulation W, competition will . . . again bring more or less demoralization in . . . down payments and maturities which will cause much irritation between finance companies, between dealers and between finance companies and their dealer customers . .

"I have been, and still am, in favor of continuing Regulation W, hoping for its better administration, in the belief that there is no other method of maintaining stability of minimum down payments, maximum maturities and sound credits on the installment sale of merchandise . . ."

Duncan, who founded the Commercial Credit Co., in 1912, addressed 120 members of the Chesapeake Chapter of Robert Morris Associates at a dinner session in the Mayflower.

With a twinkle in his eye, he reminded the bank credit officers of how banks once condemned the small loan business as economically unsound and undesirable. Now, he pointed out, many of those same banks are in active competition for this type of loans.

Roland T. Carr of the Riggs National Bank, retiring president of the chapter, presided at the session and introduced the newly-elected officers. They are: Bernard F. Armstrong, Baltimore, president; Henry Meyer, Baltimore, first vice president; R. Perry Yeatman, Washington, second vice president; Christopher A. Rupp, Baltimore, secretary-treasurer.

The board of governors: Lemuel J. Kemp, Baltimore; John Monk, Washington; John T. Flynn, jr., Baltimore; F. Ripley Bowman, Washington, and Roland T. Carr, Washington.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Raymond C. Cosgrove is the newly-elected president of the Radio Manufacturers Association. Cosgrove, executive vice president of Avco M a nufacturing Corp., previously served as RMA president in 1944, 1945 and 1946. Bond Geddes of Washington was reelected executive vice president of RMA, whose headquarters are at 1317 F st. nw. . . . Anthon H. Lund has been appointed director of the SEC's division of trading and exchanges and Sherry T. McAdam, jr., has been named associate director . . . Richard E. Imig has been elected acting executive vice president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, succeeding James E. Rutherford who will retire May 31 . . . New president of Maryland Industrial Marketers is Richard W. Darrow, director of public relations and advertising for the Glenn L. Martin Co.

GAS SALES UP: Washington Gas Light Co. reported April sales of 14,297,293 therms, a gain of 9.71 per cent over the same 1948 period. Sales for the first four months totaled 71,172,034 therms, off 2.15 per cent from the same period last year.

ODD LOTS: Peoples Drug Stores declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on capital stock, payable July 1 to stock of record June 8 . . . Media Records reports that newspaper advertising in April showed a 4.2 per cent gain over the like 1948 month and so far in 1949 is running 3.5 per cent ahead of 1948 . . . Management of Miami Copper Co. plans to request Congress to restore the import duty on copper which recently was suspended until June 30, 1950 . . . Because the Michigan PSC refused to sanction a rate increase, the Consumers Power Co. yesterday announced a $6,500,000 slash in its 1949 construction program.

STORE SALES: Washington department store sales in the week ended May 14 dipped 1 per cent under the same week last year, while regionally sales were off 6 per cent. The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond added that for the four weeks ended May 14, Washington sales were down 2 per cent and Fifth District volume was off 4 per cent.

Television Cost Cuts ABC Net in Period

New York, May 20 (AP).—The American Broadcasting Co. today reported its first quarter gross sales were 6 per cent greater than for the like period last year, but that earnings slumped due to the cost of expanding its television operations.

Gross sales of ABC and its subsidiaries totaled $20,218,410 in the first quarter against $9,631,348 for the like 1948 quarter. But the network had an estimated net loss of $64,000 for the quarter compared with net income of $502,000 for the corresponding quarter last year.

Nats Win, 5 to 3, Behind Hudson's 7-Hit Pitching

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

OPINION DEPT.—There is heartening news for the second-division Cleveland Indians and Boston Red Sox today. The American Institute of Public Opinion, sometimes called the Gallup Poll, purports to show that the Yankees will win the American League pennant.

POVICH

The Gallup Poll, you may remember, is the same outfit that predicted Thomas E. Dewey would be throwing out the first ball from the White House box at Griffith Stadium in the season's opener, after sampling public opinion. In the November elections, however, it was Losing Pitcher Dewey.

In its baseball poll, however, the Gallup people declare they have been more selective in the sampling of opinion. Only persons who said they followed major league baseball were interrogated. They amounted to 40 per cent of the persons approached.

Of that group, 26 per cent gave it as their considered opinion that the Yankees would win. Nineteen per cent liked the Indians. The Red Sox were favored by 16 per cent. Two out of every hundred picked the A's or Tigers. Thirty-four per cent were unwilling to predict. One fourth of 1 per cent favored Washington as the pennant winner.

DOBY DEPT.—That 450-foot swat by Larry Doby of the Indians that is being hailed as Yankee Stadium's record homer didn't quite match the wallop he hit off Sid Hudson in Griffith Stadium last year. At least, not in Doby's thinking, it didn't. "I'd say my Washington homer was longer," he said.

If Doby's New York smack traveled only 450 feet, then his Washington wallop was, indeed, longer. It was still in full flight when it crashed against the amplifier horns atop the centerfield wall, 407 feet distant, and mathematicians point to the fact that the horns are nearly 40 feet off the ground. Doby's ball would have come to earth at about the 470-foot mark, they estimate.

The amazing thing about Doby is that he is taking rank among the long-ball hitters despite his mere 180 pounds. Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Hank Greenberg and Johnny Mize were always either crowding or exceeding the 200-pound figure. And most of them were long fly-ball hitters, in contrast to Doby's penchant for line drives.

FELLER DEPT.—Bob Feller says that he will quit if he slumps to the kind of pitching that won't win him "more than 10 or 12 games a season." He probably will, because that kind of pitching won't command him anything near the salary to which he has become accustomed, and though he may be sore-armed, he is well-heeled.

However, 10 or 12 victories a year get some major league pitchers a pretty fair living. Only once in his eight years in the majors has Joe Haynes won more than nine games, chiefly through relief work, but they couldn't get waivers on him. In Walter Masterson's career, he has won only 42 against 68 defeats, but the Yankees and Red Sox are bidding furiously for him. The Yankees paid $100,000 last winter for Fred Sanford, a 12-game winner with the Browns.

The pitcher who can show 12 wins is rated "pretty good." Of the 120-odd pitchers carried in the American League last season, only 14 could show more than 12 wins. When and if he lapses into a mere 12-game winner, Feller can hardly consider it a disgrace. He couldn't say he is the man he used to be, but who is?

FOOTBALL DEPT.—The Baltimore Colts announce with pride the re-signing of their rookie quarterback sensation of last season, A. Y. Tittle, and in the same handout ask what the New York Giants are crowing about. The Giants had proclaimed their rookie quarterback, Charlie Conerly, as the "greatest."

The Colts demand a look at the record. They present the figures to show that Conerly completed only one more pass than Tittle in 11 more attempts; that Tittle had four fewer passes intercepted, that Tittle had a higher average of completions (55.7) than Conerly (54.0); that Tittle's completed passes averaged 1.5 more yards than Conerly's.

During one of his success streaks, they say of Tittle: "He threw 115 passes and completed 68 without an interception, and in his last seven games in the league, not a single Tittle pass fell into enemy hands."

Kennedy Allows 2 Hits, Giants Win, 5-0

Cincinnati, May 20 (AP).—Montia Kennedy pitched near-perfect ball today as he hurled the New York Giants to a 5-0 two-hit triumph over the Cincinnati Reds.

The lanky lefthander faced only 29 batters, 2 above the minimum, in fashioning his fourth victory and second shutout of the season.

Ted Kluszewski scratched a hit to the mound in the third inning and Jimmy Bloodworth singled to left in the fifth for the only Redleg safeties. The only other Red to get on was Johnny Wyrostek who reached first in the fifth when rookie Second Baseman Bobby Hofman booted his grounder.

Howie Fox, who beat Kennedy in the Polo Grounds on May 11, started for the Reds and yielded three runs in the first inning. Wildness caused his downfall.

St. Louis, May 20 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals finally found their batting eyes tonight and pounded out a 6-to-2 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers to the delight of 22,600 fans.

A three-run double by Enos Slaughter was the big blow in the Redbirds' 12-hit attack against four Flatbush flingers.

Trautman Bars Bribe Attempter

Columbus, Ohio, May 20 (U.P.).—Minor league President George L. Trautman today suspended Charlie Brewster, shortstop for Waycross in the Georgia-Florida League, for the remainder of the 1949 season for conduct detrimental to baseball.

Trautman, in a statement, said Brewster approached a teammate who was about to referee a high school championship basketball game and said the latter could make some money by "fouling out" members of one of the teams.

17 Tar Heels, 15 Terps in Track Finals

Chapel Hill, N. C., May 20 (AP).—Paced by a javelin toss of near-record proportions by Bob Kirk, defending champion North Carolina got off to a flying start today in the twenty-fifth annual Southern Conference track meet.

The Winston-Salem, N. C., junior, whose best previous effort in an unbeaten season was a winning 198 plus heave in the Penn Relays last month, came up with a qualifying toss of 210 feet 7½ inches.

Kirk's performance was the highlight of a day that saw the Tar Heels place 17 men in the finals of the 10 events in which preliminary competition was necessary. Maryland, rated right with the champions in premeet predictions, placed 15 men and highly-regarded Duke 11 to dominate the proceedings.

North Carolina's Bob Seligman, Duke's freshman Tommy Reeves and Maryland's Bill Alexion were double winners.

Seligman, defending the discus title, paced the field in that event as well as the shot put, which crown he lost a year ago to Duke's Jim O'Leary.

Reeves was the No. 1 performer in the broad jump and wound up the day with a top 220-yard low hurdles effort.

Alexion led the qualifiers in the 100 and 220-yard dashes. In the latter event his 21.5 compared with the 13-year-old Conference record of 21.1 as one of the day's better efforts.

SHOT-PUT—Seligman (North Carolina), 47 feet 1¼ inches; O'Leary (Duke), Holtsma (William and Mary), Creekmur (William and Mary), Eichorn (Maryland), Holshouser (Clemson).

440-YARD RUN—Young (Duke) and Matthews (Maryland) tied at 0:50.3; Terrell (North Carolina), Harrison (VMI), Ostrye (Maryland), Robertson (VMI).

Feller Sent to Bull Pen, Garcia Starts for Tribe

Boston, May 20 (AP).—Pitcher Bob Feller was taken off the starting staff of the Cleveland Indians today and assigned, at least temporarily, to bull pen duty.

In his place on the world champs' big four, Manager Lou Boudreau put young Mike Garcia, a promising rookie up from Oklahoma City.

Feller has been complaining of an ailing shoulder all season. He lost his first game, then won one, and dropped his last two.

Boudreau said Feller would not start any more games on the Tribe's Eastern trip. He continued: "I might use him occasionally in relief to slowly strengthen his arm. I don't think there's anything the matter with Feller that a proper amount of rest won't cure."

Garcia has won two and lost one in relief.

Rain Postpones Inquirer Open

Philadelphia, May 20 (AP).—For the third straight year the Inquirer Invitation Golf Tournament had an uninvited guest. The rains came to wash out the second round of play today.

The postponement forces the doubling up of the final day's program Sunday, when two rounds will be played instead of the originally scheduled one.

Joe Kirkwood, jr., blond movie actor from Hollywood, was was tied for the first-day lead with Bobby Locke with a 4-under-par 68, had just finished 9 holes in par 36 when the storm broke.

Terps, Hopkins Tangle Today

Maryland's peculiar form of spring sports madness—lacrosse—has broken out in full rash.

Shooting the fever up to a pitch is today's game between Johns Hopkins and the University of Maryland. While comparatively few other United States colleges play the game or give it much attention, at least 5000 fans will attend the tilt here.

It's the State's lacrosse counterpart of the Rutgers-Princeton or Army-Navy football rivalries. Things got so hot two years ago in a pitched campus battle that the two presidents warned that further shenanigans would result in suspension of lacrosse relations.

Today's game takes on special heat as Hopkins' undefeated 10 is aiming for recognition as the top member of the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association.

The team from Baltimore hasn't lost to a collegiate foe in 21 games the past 3 years. Maryland is no slouch, either. It was beaten this year only by Navy, another undefeated team.

The Maryland-Hopkins lacrosse rivalry is as close as it is heated. After 29 games dating back to 1920 the score stands at 15-14 in favor of Hopkins.

Little Generals Top G. W. High, 2-1

Washington-Lee High of Arlington won the northern Virginia title from George Washington of Alexandria by nosing out the Presidents, 2-1, last night at W-L.

It was W-L's third 2-1 win over G. W. in four games this season and brought the Little Generals' record to 14-5. They qualified for the State tournament which opens Friday in Portsmouth. Det Haslip hit a homer in the fourth for W-L's first run. Mike Lloyd's single in the eighth scored Bruce Hillenbrand with the winning run.

Sid Also Drives in 2 Runs as Browns Lose

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Out of Al Papai, the St. Louis Browns' rookie knuckle baller of Hungarian extraction, the Nats extrated five runs early last evening and coasted to a satisfactory 5-3 victory at Griffith Stadium.

They got in their licks at Papai in the first three innings, with what amounted to great foresight, because when Relief Pitchers Bill Kennedy and Dick Starr appeared on the scene the Nats got no runs at all, after the third.

Sid Hudson was the winning pitcher, and no drawback at the plate, either. He personally drove in two of the Nats' runs, and made his early lead stand up nicely with a seven-hit pitching job that shut the Browns out after the fourth inning.

The Nats' success in the shank of the evening was later reflected in the league standings. It didn't move them out of the second division, but their victory hauled 'em to within one game of the second-place Tigers who were taking a beating at Philadelphia.

Only 5500 See Game

There was a change in the weather, as only 5500 chill-braving fans were in the stands for the 1949 debut of the last-place Brown's in Griffith Stadium.

The Nat's didn't dally with Papai. Ed Stewart and Al Kozar rapped him for singles to center with one out in the first inning, and Stewart scored from third on Vollmer's grounder to second base.

Very briefly, the Browns moved in front, in the second inning. Hudson put the first two men he faced on base, Sievers with a walk, and Lollar with a single to left. He got two out before Eddie Pellagrini reached him for a single to left that scored both.

And with two out in their own half of the inning, the Nats suddenly regained the lead. Evans and Hudson singled, and Coan drew a walk from Papai that filled the bases. Stewart bashed a single to center to move the Nats in front, 3-2.

They came back for more in the third inning and got two more, slightly unearned. Vollmer was safe when Papai fumbled his tap into the box, and after two were out, Dente and Evans drew walks that filled the bases. Hudson struck the important blow — a two-run single to left.

Hudson in Command

With those five runs, Hudson was in command. He gave up a tainted run to the Browns in the fourth when Sievers took three bases on a single to right that was bobbled by Stewart, but the Browns got nothing more out of him.

Hudson was somewhat blessed in the sixth, though, when the Nats came up with a rare double play behind his back. Sievers singled with one out, and Lollar followed with a single that put men on first and second. In this situation, Dente fumbled Pinch hitter Whitey Platt's grounder, but happily for the Nats he fumbled it directly into the glove of Al Kozar who, was standing on second base and completed a twin-out with a throw to first that Ed Robinson dug out of the dirt.

In the seventh, again, the Browns had the tying run on base with one out, after Pinch hitter Bob Dillinger beat out an infield hit and Stan Spence drew a walk. But Hudson made a superlative play on Priddy's grounder, and got rid of Graham on a fly to Vollmer. The Browns never saw first base again.

IN SHORT—Manager Joe Kuhel took a dim view of Buddy Lewis' .169 batting average and benched him in favor of Ed Stewart who promptly crashed out three consecutive hits . . .

Mickey Haefner will be seeking his fourth straight this afternoon against Red Embree.

Newhouser Loses

Macks Whip Tigers, 2-1, In 10 Innings

Philadelphia, May 20.—Ferris Fain's single with one out drove Eddie Joost in with the winning run in the tenth inning as the Philadelphia Athletics advanced within a half game of second place in defeating Detroit 2-1 tonight.

Fain's hit gave Righthander Joe Coleman the nod over Hal Newhouser in a great pitching duel. Newhouser lost his own game when he walked Joost and Elmer Valo in succession.

Newhouser yielded a home-run ball to Joost in the first inning and then let Philadelphia down with four hits before he lost the decision. Coleman was touched for six, three of which went to Newhouser, and fanned nine batters. The homer was Joost's sixth of the year.

Mason-Dixon Final

AU's 12 Runs In 9th Win Title, 22-12

Chestertown, Md., May 20.—American University diamonders capped their sweep to the Mason-Dixon Conference baseball championship here today with a riotous 12-run ninth inning, accounting for a 22-12 triumph over Washington College.

The Eagles, who won yesterday's first meeting of the teams, 2-0, went into the ninth on the long end of a 10-8 count. Their 12 runs effectively took the game out of the Sho'men's reach, despite a 4-run rally. McLachlin and Tayler held the hosts to 12 hits.

Dear Folks:

Charles Town.—Variety is the word for the first weekend program of the seond meeting here. The card opens with a sprint of four and one-half furlongs and closes with a test of a mile and a quarter. The Berryville purse, the feature, is at six and a half furlongs with Cavalier Trim, a Pimlico winner, the probable favorite. Owner-Trainer Herbert "Dynamite" Kerr has arrived in these parts with his three-horse stable composed of George Snow, Dizzy Dame, jr., and Son O'Diz. All are out of Kerr's grand old mare, Dizzy Dame, who won three races in two weeks here some years back. There's a bird's nest on the result board right behind the letter "O" in the neon official sign. The feathered family gets free heat when the sign is lighted eight times daily. Of course, the whole thing is official. BILL.

Congressman Wants Links Funds Held

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.), in a fiery speech before the House yesterday, demanded that the Interior Department terminate S. G. Leoffler's operation of the District's public golf courses immediately and impound all funds.

Rivers, who originally called for the House investigation in March, claimed "in the neighborhood of $200,000 is owed by Leoffler to the Government."

The 43-year-old member of the Armed Services Committee said, "Leoffler has been able to handle the public's money like a 'drunken sailor'."

He denounced the Interior Department's "indifference to the general over-all management of the golf courses." Said Rivers, "They have forfeited all right to the future handling of these lucrative facilities."

Rivers continued, "Leoffler has been permitted to remain as de facto operator for five months and God only knows what he is doing with the money and everything connected with these courses. It is certain that the Interior Department doesn't know."

He concluded, "The public has suffered long enough. The Congress must no longer tolerate such a scandalous condition to obtain in the District of Columbia."

Meanwhile, investigation yesterday uncovered something of a stockholder "mystery."

The Interior Department audit turned over to the special Public Lands Subcommittee checking the whole golf situation lists Leoffler holding only three shares in the S. G. Loeffler Operating Co. in 1933. Another stockholders' table in 1944 has Loeffler's holding only five of the $100 par value shares.

However, when the concessioner testified before a House District Subcommittee on May 6, 1941, he stated that he owned 95 per cent of the company's stock.

Loeffler Noncommital on Audit

In 1933, the other stockholders, each holding 99 shares, included Edward Costigan, 5320 27th st. nw.; Col. Lawrence C. Crawford, 4600 Branch rd. nw., and E. S. Brashears.

In the 1944 table, the three were listed as holding substantially the same number of shares. Brashears' total was down to 89 and Leoffler's wife, Effie, and son, Severine, jr., each had 4 shares.

Leoffler refused to discuss the matter yesterday.

He said, "Now, look, there's no use talking to me about that audit. I haven't seen it and don't know what's in it."

Leoffler added, "I'm busy and I don't have time to talk to you."

Costigan Says He'll Check Up

Edward Costigan, manager of the Corson-Gruman Construction Co., said he would be glad to check the matter. He explained, however, that his records were locked up for the weekend and promised the information later.

E. S. Brashears died in 1942.

According to the audit, the three men were the principal stockholders in the Leoffler operating Co. until January, 1944. That's when Leoffler formed the S. G. Leoffler Co. with three relatives as partners, W. Alfred Farr, Alfred L. Thomas and Benjamin H. Graham. The latter died in October, 1947.

At the Interior Department, Arthur E. Demaray, National Park Service associate director, said Leoffler would have to explain the apparent stockholding discrepancy.

James B. Robinson, assistant chief of concessions who signed the audit, made it plain that the stockholder information was "historical information" taken from Interior records.

Fisherman Saved Trip By Crash In Front Yard

Olympia, Wash., May 20 (AP).—Bill Wilkening got up early today, planning to go fishing. He changed his mind when he stepped into his yard, however. The fish had come to him.

Doctor Describes Fatal Knife Fight

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, May 20 (AP).—Dr. Robert C. Rutledge, jr., testified today to a terrific battle with Byron C. Hattman for whose slaying Rutledge is on trial.

Dr. Rutledge had testified earlier that Hattman had seduced his wife against her will and then demanded $2000 to leave her alone.

Rutledge asserted the fight in the Roosevelt Hotel here last December 14 started when Hattman drew a knife and said:

"You son of a bitch, I've been waiting for this and I've got you now." He said he had met Hattman to pay him off.

The 28-year-old St. Louis pediatrician said they started fighting and the knife changed hands twice. Just before the end of the fight, Rutledge said, he (Rutledge) dropped the knife and Hattman grabbed it. "We fell forward and I was on top of him. I lay on top of him and held his hands as tight as I could. He was still struggling."

The knife fell to the floor and Rutledge said he seized it, held it by the blade, and hit Hattman on the head with the handle "two or three times," until "finally he stopped struggling." Rutledge then left.

He testified he did not know Hattman was dead until the next day, when his wife told him. He said he was so upset he went out and bought an ounce of poison "to kill myself."

"It meant that my wife, my folks, my wife's folks would be dragged into a mess. I didn't want to create a scandal for everyone," he said.

Now, he said, he was over "those notions."

Earlier today the young doctor declared he still loves his wife. His voice frequently faltered and broke when he told how his wife, Sydney, 23, confessed that the young engineer was forcibly intimate with her after she became ill from drinks last July 31.

His morning testimony was climaxed by introduction of an otoscope—a medical instrument—which the defense indicated was of great significance.

Dr. Rutledge explained it was used by doctors to examine ears and noses. It bore some resemblance to a piece of pipe or wood.

Mrs. Rutledge took the stand briefly to deny that she had said a week after her alleged seduction that she "enjoyed being in Hattman's company." She left the courtroom when her husband took the stand.

Dr. Rutledge, his eyes frequently moist with tears, told how he was working long hours at St. Louis Children's Hospital when Hattman became friendly with his wife. Last July he was promoted to assistant resident physician.

"I worked from eight in the morning to 5 or 6 every day, and every other day I took charge of the hospital at night," he testified. "That means I would work, say, from Monday 8 a. m. to Tuesday 5 or 6 p. m. I would then go back Wednesday at 8 a. m."

Asked how many hours that would be, he replied "about 36 hours with 12 or 14 at home."

He said he learned of his wife's affair after overhearing a country club conversation.

"In substance," he said, "the remarks were that my wife had been out with Mr. Hattman and from what I heard Mr. Hattman had been bragging about it."

When he and Mrs. Rutledge returned home, he said, she told him the whole story of going sailing with Hattman and drinking with him.

"Did she tell you she went out to dinner with him, that he forced his way into your apartment and forced himself upon her?" he was asked.

Dr. Rutledge said, "I was heartbroken. We sat up all night talking about it."

"Did you have any idea up to this time that your wife was taking trips in bathing suits alone up the river with Hattman?" he was asked.

"Well, I knew she was going sailing but I didn't know she and Hattman were going alone," Rutledge said.

The doctor said he called Hattman the very next day and told him to leave Mrs. Rutledge alone. He went on to say that Hattman continually called him and Mrs. Rutledge indecent names and threatened him.

Rutledge said: "He called me at the hospital. He said, 'Rutledge, You dirty son of a bitch, what's the idea of calling up my moth ' I said I thought probably she could persuade him to leave us alone. Hattman then said, 'If you do that again, I'll come over there and beat the hell out of you.'"

"Early in October I was at home when my wife gave me the phone and said, 'It's Hattman again.' He said, 'Why don't you give her a divorce and let her have some fun. You're not married to her. You're married to the hospital.' I told him all we wanted was to be left alone. He asked me, 'What do you want to live with that whore for?'"

Rutledge said that on subsequent calls Hattman "consistently referred to my wife" obscenely.

"On one occasion, after I had engaged a private detective to try to get him to leave us alone, Hattman called and threatened to come over and 'beat the hell out of me'," Rutledge testified. "Then he said 'I never beat a whore out of her pay yet. I'll send you a fee for that party I had with her'."

Dr. Rutledge said he received a quarter in the mail the next day.

On another occasion, he continued, Hattman called him and said he didn't want Mrs. Rutledge's 'pants littering up the back seat of my car—I'll send them back to you.'

"The next day," the doctor testified, "I got a package in the mail. It was a pair of women's panties. They were brand new and had the price tag still on them. I think the price was 59 cents."

CREWMEN FOUGHT OVER HER—Lavinia Ross, 22, of Southampton, England, is removed from the tanker British Genius at Miami, Fla., yesterday

Blonde Fouls Tanker, Runs It Aground

Miami, Fla., May 20 (U.P.).—Blonde and plumpish Lavinia Ross, 22, started back to Britain tonight, complaining that she didn't have as much fun as she expected on her seven-day voyage as the guest of two crewmen on a tanker.

Smuggled aboard the tanker British Genius at Southhampton by two crewmen, Miss Ross set off a chain of boy-meets-girl reaction that caused a pail-swinging free-for-all aboard ship, forced the captain to head for Miami instead of Beaumont, Tex., and resulted in the ship running aground off Miami.

She boarded a train tonight for Ellis Island, N. Y., from where she will be deported to Britain. To the great relief of Skipper Herbert A. Scott, that trip will be in another vessel.

With her were the two crewmen of the British Genius, Donald Hanford and Charles Piper, with whom she started her big adventure. Captain Scott decided to retain the third member of the battle over Miss Ross, Gerald E. Leech, for the remainder of the voyage.

Lavinia's adventure was launched in a Southampton pub on the night of May 1. There she met and matched drinks, she said, with Hanford and Piper.

She said she did not remember going aboard the ship and realized she was afloat the next day when the deck rocked gently.

Hanford and Piper rescued her from the rope locker the first day out and established her in their quarters, where they were her only companions during the first few days of the voyage.

But, Miss Ross told immigration officials, Seaman Leech discovered her presence. When Piper and Hanford told him they preferred to be alone with Miss Ross, Leech went to Captain Scott and revealed conditions below deck.

Leech's action earned him the scorn of the crew, Piper and Hanford said, and bad feelings flared into open battle on the deck three days ago. In a three-cornered melee, Piper was hit in the eye with a bucket. His eye was so severely damaged that Scott changed course and put into Miami, where the tanker ran aground.

Annapolis Gets Carnival Spirit At Age of 300

Annapolis, Md., May 20 (AP).—Annapolis warmed up to the carnival spirit today, on the eve of its 300th birthday celebration.

Nearly a year of preparations for a gala tercentenary began to show results when city officials opened an anniversary exhibition in the National Guard Armory.

The week-long tercentenary really gets under way Saturday night with the first showing of "Song of the Severn," a pageant in which 750 townspeople re-enact the first two centuries of Annapolis history.

They were lucky tonight as a late sun poked through the overcast to allow the pageant cast a full dress rehearsal on the high school athletic field.

She was chosen "Princess Anne" in a competition with other Anne Arundel County girls.

Governor Lane and other notables will speak.

The pageant will be repeated Sunday night, and every night until Wednesday.

To make sure the revelry is not interrupted, the police department announced today that approach roads will be blocked from 4 to 6 p. m. Tuesday and Wednesday. Those are days of the street parades.

Vermont Jails Third Ex-GI

Rutland, Vt., May 20 (U.P.).—A third war veteran has been jailed indefinitely in Vermont because he can't pay a court judgment, it was revealed today as the first two debtor-prisoners appealed to President Truman for help.

The latest former GI jailed under an old statute is Frederick L. Lapan, 32, of Marshfield, Vt., father of three children. He was arrested and confined in Montpelier May 2 because he couldn't pay a $450 judgment arising from an automobile accident.

The others held under the State's 140-year-old "poor debtor" law are Ralph J. Fugatt, 29, of Springfield, Mass., and Bernard J. Smith, jr., 23, of Fair Haven, Vt. Smith has been in jail for 15 months and Fugatt for two months.

A native of Miami, Fla., Jensen enlisted in the Marine Corps in May, 1940. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in July, 1943, and that same year served in the Pacific with Marine fighter squadrons operating in the Solomon Islands.

He was later returned to the United States, but in 1945 he went out again with another fighter squadron for combat duty in the Pacific.

Jensen, who gained the name of "one-man blitz" for his exploits in the Pacific, was educated in Washington area schools after his family moved here from Clemson, S. C., where he was born.

He attended Washington and Lee High School in Arlington and was graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School in the District.

Enlisted in 1940

For a short time after his graduation, he worked in the Government Printing Office. Then, after one year at Louisiana State University, he enlisted in 1940 as a regular Marine.

He received his training at Quantico and Pensacola, was assigned to Pearl Harbor and then moved on to the South Pacific.

In April, 1943, while still a technical sergeant, he shot down two Zeros over Guadalcanal in his first aerial battle. For this, he received the Air Medal. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in July, 1943, and soon qualified as an ace by shooting down four more Jap planes.

But his bigest achievement, one that won him the Navy Cross, was on August 28, 1943, when he made a one-man raid on the Japs' Kahili airfield on Bougainville. This is the way the official citation described his feat:

"Without regard for his personal safety, he dived through the enemy fire, strafing and exploding a group of 12 medium bombers, 4 dive bombers and 8 Zeros, leaving them burning on the field."

admitted that it may not have had a right to search the 14th st. address, but claimed it did have a right to search the 12th st. address, incidental to the arrest of Acalotti there.

Ford also asserted that an affidavit of Bernice Franklin supporting the Acalotti search warrant was signed March 25 and charged that Acalotti had been involved in gambling at 14th st., in January, two months earlier. Ford contended this lapse of two months was excessive.

Hitz countered with the claim that in the Franklin affidavit, the red-headed Government witness also said that Acalotti told her on March 4 that he was still in business, but at the 12th st. address. Hitz asserted that therefore there had been only a 21-day delay between the date of the offense and the issuance of the warrant.

Ford admitted that a warrant might issue after a 21-day delay, but said that in the Acalotti case such warrant would have to name the 12th st. address where Acalotti said he was then running his business, not the 14th st. address.

Four Affidavits on Phone Use

In another action yesterday in United States Attorney George Morris Fay's campaign to curtail gambling, the Government filed four affidavits as evidence that the telephone in the American Restaurant, 407 9th st. nw., was used in violation of the District gambling laws.

The restaurant has asked for a court order restraining removal of its telephone.

In two affidavits, Deputy United States Marshal Pasquale Sanducci told of visiting the restaurant on five occasions during last December and January. On those occasions he said he saw men, identified only as "Herbie" and "Tony," use a telephone to take and place horse race and numbers bets, and receive results.

A third affidavit signed by Wilfred J. Barrett, 23-year old law student and Government undercover agent in the Fay campaign, told of accompanying Sanducci to the restaurant on January 4, when Sanducci placed a $1 bet on the number 512.

Argument on Injunction

The fourth affidavit, signed by Archer Roberts, exchange manager for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, said that the telephone involved was leased to the Strand Restaurant, Inc., trading as the American Restaurant.

Under a plan established May 12 by Judge Alexander Holtzoff, the restaurant will answer the Government affidavits within the next two working days, and the motion to enjoin will be argued Wednesday.

District Court Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday received an 18-page memorandum from four defense attorneys in support of their contention that the evidence seized in the Government's case against 14 indicted gamblers, headed by William "Snags" Lewis, should be suppressed.

The lawyers, Myron Ehrlich, William A. Collins, Bernard Margolius and Ford, contend that a United States marshal for the District had no right to serve a warrant in Prince Georges County, Md., that was issued by a United States Commissioner in Bethesda.

The L-shaped building of cement and brick will be used by the National Institute of Health in Bethesda. Total area will be 52,000 square feet, with two stories and a basement.

Construction will start immediately, and is scheduled for completion in 330 working days.

Civil Service Opposes Further Extension of Hiring by U. S. Agencies

The Civil Service Commission has placed itself on record as being flatly opposed to further decentralization of hiring in Government. It revealed that 50 per cent of all new Federal workers are now hired by the agencies.

President Harry B. Mitchell told the Senate Appropriations Committee that further decentralization of the hiring system would lead to waste and duplication. He was joined by Commissioners Frances Perkins and James Mitchell in urging the committee to restore funds slashed from the Civil Service budget by the House.

Mitchell said the commission's examining staff would have to be cut 40 per cent and a total of 650 employes fired if the House budget were allowed. He emphasized that it would be far cheaper for Uncle Sam to have the commission's staff continue competitive tests than it would be for each agency to do its own recruiting and examining.

The House agreed with the Hoover commission recommendation that Federal hiring should be made the general responsibility of the agencies, but conducted under Civil Service standards.

Civil Service officials also pointed out that the agencies would not have the staff to conduct the tests if the House limitation of 1 personnel employe to 125 workers were kept in the independent offices money bill. This restriction would wipe out about 3500 personnel jobs. The commission asked for its removal.

G-GIRLS at Arlington Farms should know that there was no unanimous agreement among Federal housing officials to raise their rents approximately $9.50 a month.

Local housing officials in Arlington County, where the Farms are situated, were absolutely opposed to the lifting of rent ceilings on the Federal project. It was argued that a boost to $30 would be ample to take the Farms out of the red.

Sailor Faces Questioning On Girl's Story

A young sailor was held by Naval authorities yesterday for questioning in connection with the story of two sisters, 9 and 10, that he molested them during an auto ride.

The sisters told conflicting stories. The 9-year-old said it was the older girl who had been criminally assaulted. The older sister said the sailor had raped the younger girl.

They agreed, however, that the sailor picked them up at about 11 p. m. Thursday in front of a restaurant in southeast Washington and drove them in his car along the Anacostia River.

The sailor, police said, admitted that he had picked up the two girls and taken them for a ride but denied molesting them. The girls were examined but there was no evidence of rape.

The girls' mother reported them missing to police after they failed to return home from school Thursday at 3 p. m. They live in the 700 block of 7th st. se.

The younger sister was found shortly after midnight near her home. The older girl was picked up by police at about 3 a. m. near 7th and G sts se.

Zoo Exhibits Animals Used In Drug Study

Eleven rare species of small animals used by an Army medical team in Malaya in its discovery of a cure for scrub typhus and typhoid fever went on display yesterday at the Zoo.

They include the smallest cat in captivity, eight different kinds of jungle tree rats with monkey-like hands for climbing trees, two rare squirrels and two bamboo rats.

They were flown from Kuala Lumpur in Malaya to Singapore, where the Air Force picked them up and brought them on here.

The animals were among those used by an Army Medical Department Research and Graduate School in trying out the drug chloromycetin.

The team, directed by Dr. Joseph E. Smadel, one of its discoverers, found that the drug will prevent scrub typhus—known also as Japanese river fever—and will cure scrub typhus, typhoid fever and other diseases. The Malaya expeditions were made in March and November of 1948.

The mites, ticks and fleas with which the animals abounded at the time of their use by the medical group are now all gone, Zoo visitors were assured.

Police Hunting Yeggs Meet Auto Theft

Police charged three men yesterday with housebreaking in an attempted safe burglary at the Savoy Theater, 3030 14th st. nw.

At about 4 p. m., Pvt. John S. Trodden of the Tenth Precinct walked into an alley in the rear of the theater and saw two men sitting in a parked car.

Charged were David Curry, 28, of 627 Florida ave. ne.; Joseph A. Proctor, 27, of 1932 15th st. nw., and Felix W. Stevenson, 26, of 4624 Galt pl. ne.

Service revolver in hand, he approached them. They told him they were "sleeping off a drunk."

One of the men produced a driver's license but it didn't match the name on the registration card from the steering wheel of the car. Nor did they have the keys to start the car.

Trodden marched the pair to a police call box and requested a patrol wagon along with a crane to remove the car. The patrol wagon picked up the two men and Trodden returned to the alley. The car was gone.

However, Trodden remembered the tag number and a lookout was flashed on the police radio. A short time later, the car, with a third man driving, was stopped by police at N. Capitol st. and Florida ave.

Meanwhile, Trodden was checking inside the theater. He found the rear door of the theater had been pried open. In the theater office he found several file cabinets had been broken open and the safe had been ripped from its concrete mooring. The dial had been smashed off but the safe had not been opened. Police later learned the safe contained between $300 and $400.

Police also were investigating the theft of a green metal safe containing $379 from the Cotton Club, 1553 Benning rd. ne.

Police Private Fined in Arm Fracture Case

A Police Trial Board yesterday fined Pvt. Frank Bones of the Eighth Precinct $175 on three of four charges involving failure to report a broken arm and lying to a superior officer.

The case arose when Pvt. Bones, according to his testimony yesterday, broke his arm in a fall down the cellar steps of his home, 3736 Military rd. nw. on April 18. The accident occurred two hours before he was to report for duty after two days' leave.

He was charged later with failing to report an injury received while off duty, failing to report immediately to the police clinic, failing to respond to questions of a superior officer and making untruthful statements.

Bones testified that he first thought his arm injury was a sprain, and reported to the police surgeon the day after his fall. As to his failure to make a report of the injury to the captain in writing, he said he had not read the new police manual and did not think it was required.

Private Bones also said he did not make any untruthful statements to Capt. John E. Fondahl of the Eighth Precinct knowingly, and did not remember much about his conversation with him.

He was fined $100 on the untruthful statements charge, $50 for failing to respond to questions, and $25 for failing to report his injury. He was warned on the surgeon report charge.

The case of Pvt. Lewis D. Crooke of the Twelfth Precinct, charged with being drunk while off duty, malingering and feigning illness, was postponed until 1 p. m. next Friday.

Arlington Man Held For Jury On Rape Charges

William A. Martin, 21-year-old Arlington carpenter, was ordered held yesterday for the Fairfax County grand jury on a charge of rape. The charge was presented by a 53-year-old widow who said she was assaulted May 4 in her home near Lorton, Va.

After a closed hearing before Trial Justice Harry L. Carrico, Martin's bond was reduced from $10,000 to $1000.

Wallace E. Bearse, 805 S 21st st., Arlington, who had been held under $2500 bond as a material witness, was released.

An Arlington girl, 17 years old, also has accused Martin of raping her while police were waiting at his home to arrest him May 10 on the Fairfax charge.

If Men Leave

County Court Suspends 4 Sentences

Sentences of four men charged with either drunkenness or vagrancy in Arlington County Court were suspended yesterday on condition the men leave the county and never return.

In suspending the fines and jail terms, Judge Harry R. Thomas said if any of the four returned, he would double the original penalty. Court officials said this form of sentencing is unusual in the county.

Charged with being intoxicated were Ralph M. West, 45, of Lakeland, Fla., whose $5 fine was suspended, and Luther Hudson, 60, of no fixed address, who was given a suspended sentence of $5 and 30 days in jail.

Thirty-day sentences also were suspended for Harry D. Washington, 57, and Charlie H. Brown, 54, both of no fixed address. Both were charged with vagrancy.

Said Judge Thomas: "I don't see any sense in Arlington feeding them."

Bill Stiffens D.C. Pharmacy Inspections

Rep. Carl T. Durham (D., N. C.) yesterday introduced a House bill calling for stricter regulation of District pharmacies.

Durham, a pharmacist himself, said the bill would place the District law for regulating pharmacies on a par with those of many of the states. He said he introduced the bill after discussing it with members of the District Board of Pharmacy, which prepared the measure.

The bill would give the District board increased powers for prescribing standards of equipment and sanitation in pharmacies here.

It would also authorize the board to enforce its regulations through a new system of annual inspections of local pharmacies.

Board member F. Royce Franzoni explained that inspections are now made on the basis of specific complaints, and the board relies on the police for these inspections. He said a single inspector would be able to make the annual inspection of the approximately 325 pharmacies in Washington.

He said the bill is modeled upon legislation now in force in 34 States.

Silver Spring Gets 5-Digit Dials Tonight

About 1200 telephone subscribers in Silver Spring, Md., change over to the new five-digit dial system at midnight tonight.

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. announced yesterday that the facilities have been installed in the Silver Spring telephone center at a cost of $500,000.

The new exchange is JUniper 7. It affects about a third of the telephones in the Silver Spring area.

Washington was introduced to the five-digit system with the April, 1949, directory, covering LIncoln, LUdlow, LOcust, KEnmore offices as well as the new central exchanges, JOhnson, LOckwood and LOgan.

Earlier, the five-digit system was confined to much larger cities, such as New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and Philadelphia.

Tonight's changeover will be marked by a ceremony at the telephone center attended by V. J. Richter, president of the Allied Civic Group; Albert E. Conradis, Montgomery County Public Utility agent; Einar Christensen, president, Silver Spring Board of Trade; and County Councilman J. Douglas Bradshaw.

Central Labor Union Assails Flanagan As Partial Toward 'Unfriendly' Firms

President Truman yesterday was asked to appoint "someone else" when the term of James H. Flanagan, District Public Utilities Commission chairman, expires on June 30.

The request came in a letter signed by Frank J. Coleman, secretary of the Washington Central Labor Union (AFL). Coleman asked on behalf of the union that the new appointee be someone "who will have the interest of the general public at heart."

He declared, "It is an established fact that Mr. Flanagan has shown a special interest in firms in this city which are unfriendly to the members of our organization.

"Our representatives have repeatedly protested to Mr. Flanagan concerning his disregard for the interest of the general public of the District of Columbia and by his constant and biased solicitude for the interest of the public utilities instead of the consumers whom he was appointed to protect."

Coleman said the letter followed action of the labor union May 16, when a motion proposing the request was unanimously adopted.

C. F. Preller, president of the local union, indicated that the letter is the "first blow" in an effort to have Flanagan replaced.

Flanagan, who declined to comment, was appointed to a vacant post on the commission by the late President Roosevelt in 1942. He served in the Securities and Exchange Commission as supervising utilities analyst and has lived in Washington since 1935.

Prior to his Federal Government service, Flanagan was employed by public utilities firms in New York and Brazil.

William H. Henry, of 37 L st. nw., was taken to Emergency Hospital, where he was treated for shock and multiple cuts and bruises. Driver of the truck was Virgil Robinson, 32, of 1263 Howison pl. sw.

1-Mile Parade Set for Today In Alexandria

Alexandria's Bicentennial Parade of Progress, with 18 bands and 26 floats in the line of march, is set for today, beginning at 2 p. m.

The mile-long parade is sponsored by the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce and Retail Merchants Association. Its general theme is the city's economic development in its first 200 years.

Starting from Franklin and S. Washington sts., the procession will move north to Prince st., then east to Fairfax st., north to King st., and then west to West st., where it will disband. The reviewing stand has been set up at Commerce and King sts.

Mary Kennedy, 21-year-old Bicentennial Queen, will be enthroned on the lead float. Eight other contestants for her title will ride with her as princesses. A reception will be held for the Queen at noon at the George Mason Hotel with a luncheon following.

Grand marshal of the parade will be Harry Hammond, one of the first presidents of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce. He will be followed by the Quantico Marine Band, city officials, and the procession of floats interspersed with bands.

Most of the floats have been entered by Alexandria business and civic groups. The last item on the scheduled line of march, however, is the Remmie Arnold Pen Co. float from Petersburg, Va., which won first prize at the Winchester Apple Blossom Festival.

The Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. announced it will reroute buses away from the center of town during the parade. It advised passengers to board buses at the Pitt st. terminal from 1:45 p. m. until the parade is over.

Another bicentennial event will be held tonight at 7:30 when groups from Alexandria schools will stage a songfest at the George Washington Masonic National Memorial.

Settlement Near for New Bullis Tract

The board of trustees of the Bullis School, Silver Spring, Md., is negotiating for the purchase of the 400-acre Merritt estate on Viers Mill rd., near Rockville, Md.

An offer of more than $200,000 has been accepted, according to real estate agents Robert McKeever and Calvert Bowie. Settlement is expected within a few weeks.

The Bullis School, at 8501 Houston ave., Silver Spring, is a four-year private high school for boys. Plans call for expanding the school from the seventh grade through two years of college, with an enrollment of 450 students. New buildings will be erected on the estate under a five-year plan. Architectural drawings are being prepared.

According to Al H. Grossman, headmaster, there is a possibility that the seventh and eighth grades will be conducted at the new site next fall. Meanwhile, preparations are being made for the use of an outdoor swimming pool by students attending the summer session beginning next month, Grossman said. The plans also call for operation of a large farm on the future school site.

School Tax Power Sought In Falls Church

Falls Church would lose between $30,000 and $50,000 during the first year if a court order allows the city to operate its own schools, City Attorney LaRue Van Meter said yesterday.

But as soon as the city gets a new charter—permitting it to levy its own school tax—Falls Church could roll up an annual surplus of $71,800, according to Van Meter.

The question of who should run the schools, Fairfax County or Falls Church, is now being decided by the Fairfax Circuit Court.

Under its present charter, framed when Falls Church was still a town, the city has no power to levy a school tax. So officials hope to put a new charter—carrying this power—through next January's session of the Virginia General Assembly.

If Falls Church residents paid the city the same $2.65 school tax they now pay the county, Van Meter said, "we could operate the schools with an annual surplus of $71,800."

He said his figures were rough, but based on the Fairfax County budget.

If Falls Church gets court permission to run the schools beginning next fall, the city attorney said, it would get money from these sources to operate them:

1. From the State, which now pays an average of $42 per year per student.

2. From Fairfax County, whose students constitute two thirds of those enrolled in Falls Church schools, in the form of tuition payments.

But until Falls Church can levy its own school tax, VanMeter said, it will operate its schools at a loss despite the two income sources.

Montgomery License Laws To Be Revised

Repeal of all Montgomery County licensing laws and enactment of new ordinances to be strictly enforced was tentatively decided on last night by the county council.

The present county government setup to cope with a wide range of activities subject to licensing and inspection "is in a mess," Council President Frederick P. Lee said.

At a public hearing in Rockville on legislation which would establish a department of inspection and licenses, the council instructed Lee, who sponsored the bill, to bring in an amendment.

The department would have the function of administering and enforcing existing local laws relating to licensing and inspection. Some of these laws apply to such matters as amusement places, plumbers, electricians, hucksters, refuse collectors, dumps and building regulations.

After county administrative officials told of "confusion surrounding the present involved and conflicting laws," the council told Lee to amend the bill so present laws would be repealed as soon as new and clearer laws were enacted.

Although the hearing had been publicly announced, no citizens attended. For the benefit of the council, County Manager I. G. McNayr and his aides outlined present and past policies of the county government in such matters.

In most cases, with the exception of health department functions, there is no inspection; permits are issued without investigation and no one is prosecuted for failing to take out a license, the council was told.

Damaskinos, Former Greek Regent, Dies

Athens, May 20 (AP).—Archbishop Damaskinos Orthodox Primate and former Regent of Greece, died at his home today after a heart attack. He was 58.

Damaskinos had been in poor health for several months. He was stricken while working at his office in the archbishopric.

For many years Damaskinos had been a leading figure in the political as well as the religious life of his country. The giant bell of the Greek Orthodox Cathedral here tolled at his death. People streamed into the cathedral to offer prayers for him.

The civil strife now in progress in Greece had its beginnings in the days immediately preceding the Archbishop's designation as Regent on December 30, 1944. He held the post until September 5, 1946. Damaskinos stepped down after a plebiscite on the monarchy went in favor of King George II and the King returned to his throne.

Greece was torn by violence when Damaskinos became Regent. On Christmas Day, 1944, Winston Churchill, then Prime Minister of Britain, and Anthony Eden, then British Foreign Secretary, arrived in Athens "to convene a conference representative as far as possible of Greek political opinion."

The delegates decided a regency council under Damaskinos offered the best chance of order. King George II then made the appointment.

A dozen governments were formed and collapsed during Damaskinos' regency. He threatened to resign several times but Greek political leaders felt he was the only person in the country with enough stature to fill the post.

Damaskinos went to the United States in 1930 and mediated a quarrel, largely political, between factions of the Greek Orthodox Church. He was elected Archbishop of Athens and Primate of Greece in November, 1938.

Regarded by many of his countrymen as a fighting liberal, Damaskinos spent three years in exile during the regime of the Greek "strong man," Gen. John Metaxas.

The tall, bearded religious leader was a symbol of Greek resistance during the war. He defied German authority numerous times.

Greece was the only nation occupied by the Germans which did not send conscripted civilians to work in Germany. This is credited to Damaskinos alone.

The funeral will be held Tuesday at the Greek Orthodox Cathedral.

THE PRESIDENT of the United States was guest of honor and the President of Brazil host at the state dinner preceding the gala reception at the Brazilian Embassy last evening. Brazil's President Host to 2000 At Brilliant Embassy Reception

By Marie McNair

THE GARDEN reception last night at the Brazilian Embassy, with the President of one country host to the President of another, was royal entertainment with the democratic touch.

There was pomp and ceremony—it's not to be avoided when two chiefs of state meet. But formality was dispelled by the steady smile of the host, Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra, President of the United States of Brazil.

President and Mrs. Truman left the fete early, remaining in the receiving line only long enough to face the battery of cameras. The First Lady wore a gown of gray lace. Then, as guests began to arrive—some even half an hour before the party was scheduled to open—the Brazilian Ambassador and President Dutra stood with the Brazilian Minister of Foreign Relations and Mme. Fernandes, and Mme. Dutra, daughter-in-law of the President, to greet the long line forming at the garden entrance.

State Dinner

There was ceremony as President Dutra led the way to the dining room where the guests took their places about the flower-decked table for the state dinner which preceded the reception.

Vice President Alben Barkley was a guest at the dinner; so, too were Miss Margaret Truman, Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson and the Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn.

Others were the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder, the Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Louis Johnson, the Attorney General and Mrs. Tom Clark, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Jesse Donaldson, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Julius Krug, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannan and the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Charles Sawyer. The only two members of the Senate were Arthur Vandenberg, and Foreign Relations chairman Tom Connally, with Mrs. Connally.

James E. Webb, Acting Secretary of State, and Mrs. Webb were in the company in the absence of Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson, who left yesterday for Paris.

Congress Represented

Representative John Kee, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House, and Mrs. Kee were there, and also seated around the table were Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt—she's official hostess for her father, the Vice President; Herschel Johnson, United States Ambassador to Brazil; Chief of Protocol and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, Military Aide to President Truman, and Mrs. Vaughan; Rear Admiral Osborne B. Hardison, special aide to President Dutra, and Mrs. Hardison; Rear Admiral Robert L. Dennison, USN, Naval Aide to President Truman, and Mrs. Dennison, and Mrs. Robert Landry, wife of Colonel Landry, President Truman's Air Force Aide.

The Brazilian Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco, quite naturally, was a guest at the dinner, and in the group also were the Portuguese Ambassador, Pedro Theotonio Pereira; the Minister of Foreign Relations of Brazil and Mme. Fernandes, and other members of the Presidential party which includes Arthur de Sousa Costa; Jose F. de Sousa, Jose Pereira Lira, the Chief of Protocol and Mme. Lousada, Capt. Raul Reis Goncalves, Carlos Roberto Aguiar Moreira, Edmundo Barbosa da Silva, Lieut. Jose Barreto de Assumpcao and Mme. de Assumpcao; Capt. Pedro Pessoa de Almeida, Capt. Anibal Amazonas Rebello.

The Brazilian Ambassador to the Organization of American States and Mme. Accioly, were guests.

Symphony Orchestra

There was pomp as members of the National Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Eleazar de Carvalho, distinguished Brazilian conductor, promptly at 11 o'clock opened the musicale program with the appropriate "Outdoor Overture," went on to play Francisco Braga's "Variations on a Brazilian Theme" and other Brazilian and American compositions.

There was beauty in the great masses of flowers inside and out. A huge centerpiece of red roses graced the dining room table. Yellow roses, white lilies and pale and deep blue delphiniums filled the drawing room. In the music room pink roses predominated and white peonies, red roses and snapdragons with a background of palms and ferns blossomed in the foyer.

The long garden was completely encased in a tent, the poles and ropes wound with cypress sprays. A buffet table with row upon row of hams and turkeys, glace salmon, heavily frosted cakes in Brazil's national colors, stretched full length along the greensward. On the opposite side champagne corks popped at the bar.

Decorated Diplomats

Decorations were in order at this—the most formal and elaborate party of the season. I saw the orange ribband of the Netherlands Ambassador, Eelco van Kleffens, across his starched white shirt front, and Mme. van Kleffens in a summery printed chiffon. The Luxembourg Minister, Hughes LeGallais, wore a bright blue sash and silver medal.

The ladies wore their fanciest frocks, although most of the gowns were hidden under fur wraps. Mrs. John Nicholas Brown's starched white organdy was dotted with wheels of lace centered with rhinestones.

Mrs. George Mesta wore silver tissue with a white nylon stole, and carried a mink jacket.

The New Zealand Ambassador Sir Carl Berendsen, pinned a string of medals to his chest and Lady Berendsen's white chiffon gown was topped with a fur jacket.

The Iran Ambassador, Hussein Ala, was there and I saw the Egyptian Ambassador Abdul Rahim and Mme. Abdul Rahim in a long-fitted coat of white brocade. Former Secretary of the Navy, John L. Sullivan, was accompanied by Mrs. Sullivan who wore a pale pink taffeta gown with bands of black sequins. One of the handsomest couples was Gen. Patrick Hurley, and Mrs. Hurley, a cloud of electric blue tulle about her shoulders, matching her beaded crepe frock.

Diplomatic Dinners

The Norwegian Ambassador, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, and Mme. Morgenstierne in a full chiffon gown of pale blue, entertained at dinner beforehand, their guests including the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Norman Makin, the Ambassador of Pakistan and Mme. Ispahani, the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. LeGallais, the Minister of Iceland and Mme. Thors, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. Hope Ridings Miller and Elovius Mangor, Secretary of the Norwegian Embassay.

There was a dinner at the Turkish Embassy, too, with most of the guests going on to the reception. In the group were the Ambassador of Egypt and Mme. Rahim, Senator and Mrs. Elbert Thomas, Senator and Mrs. Bourke Hickenlooper, Representative Paul Shafer, the Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Representative and Mrs. Dewey Short, Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hill, jr., Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner, Miss Betty Beale, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden and the Counselor of the Turkish Embassy, Nizamettin Erenel, and the new Financial Counselor, Nahit Alpar.

Others having dinner parties were Miss Carolyn Nash and George Williams who entertained together.

Miss Truman To Give Dance

A DANCE will be given at Blair House this evening with the President's daughter, Miss Margaret Truman, acting as hostess. The dance will be small, as Blair House and Blair Lee House combined cannot accommodate more than 100 guests.

Miss Truman will entertain at a small dinner preceding the dance. Other guests will come in around 10 o'clock.

Westerbergs Hosts At Cocktail Party

Sees 10½ Billion Possible Saving

Sen. Smith Asks Deep Spending Cut

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) yesterday called for economy in government in lieu of tax increases or deficit spending. She made her proposal in a speech before members of the Congressional Club at the weekly tea.

"The President has called for a four-billion-dollar tax increase. He says that the only alternative is deficit spending," she told some 300 wives of the Nation's lawmakers and their guests. "But I believe that we no longer have an unlimited charge account upon taxpayers.

"Is there any alternative other than those proposed by the President?" she continued. "Yes, I think it is economy in our Government.

She said that to make any real saving, reductions must start with the big items, so far considered "untouchables" in the budget, viz: (1) national defense, (2) aid to Europe, and (3) veterans.

Cut Defense Spending

"If matters go well at the Paris meeting of the Big Four, and the threat of war is materially lessened, I would seriously question the justification of continuance of our armed services on the present '15-billion-dollar scale,' declared the Maine Senator. "Excluding the stockpiling portion of the defense budget, approximately one half, or more than six billion dollars, is allocated to salaries and wages. I am confident that this item—the largest of the largest portion of our budget—could be safely and drastically reduced by cutting down our standing forces and increasing our reserve forces."

Pointing out that modern military might is measured in terms of machines rather than men, Sen. Smith said, "Since a reservist trains only one day a week at most, his cost is only one fraction of a regular. It is conceivable that a greater emphasis on machines and reservists could cut the 6 bill cost in half. Such a cut, together with the elimination of the 1½ billion dollar waste reported by Mr. Hoover in the Hoover Commission report, would mean a 4½-billion-dollar saving."

Reduced European Aid

According to the speaker, aid to Europe costs us some six billion dollars a year.

"When Europe gets back on her feet, this aid must be stopped," she emphasized. "This saving would bring the potential over-all economy up to 9½ billion dollars.

Senator Smith said that the Europeans must be conditioned to a reduction in United States aid.

Referring to the Hoover Commission report, Senator Smith said, "Ultimate potential savings in the Veterans' Administration have been estimated as high as one billion dollars. This would bring the economy potential to $10,500,000,000 on the big 'untouchable' items alone."

"Veterans deserve the very best. But they are taxpayers like everybody else," she concluded.

Senator Smith proposed that the 25 per cent of Federal employes who quit their jobs each year be not fully replaced. "It seems to me that this offers a very good potential in cutting down our cost of Government. We could effect the 5 or 10 per cent general cut that economy forces in the Senate have sought without success so far."

Hits Personnel Direction

"With a 25 per cent annual personnel turnover, the simple thing to do would be not to replace the vacancies created when personnel left the particular agency or department," explained Mrs. Smith, commenting, "this would call for alert personnel management. It would force it. And if there is anything that we need in our Government it is better personnel management."

Honor guests at the tea were Lady Berendsen, wife of the New Zealand Ambassador; Lady Franks, wife of the British Ambassador, and Senora de Thomen, wife of the Ambassador from the Dominican Republic. Mrs. Homer Ferguson, program chairman, presented the speaker, and Mrs. Sheridan Downey, first vice president of the club, presided.

Fur Storage Call DI. 4004

Ask Anne

How long can baby food in glass containers be kept successfully in the refrigerator and still be safe to serve to the baby?

K. C. T.

If the temperature of the refrigerator is kept low and the food is stored in the coldest part (right under the freezing unit) food will stay fresh for three to four days. If the baby doesn't eat the contents of a jar in that time, tightly cover with waxed paper held with an elastic band or aluminum foil and place inside the freezing unit to freeze. If kept frozen, it will keep indefinitely.

Do you know of a good recipe for a hot or cold casserole dish suitable for serving at a buffet supper? My husband is in the service and I wish to give him a promotion party, buffet style, for 12 to 18 people.

K. C. T.

Ham Casserole

¼ pound American cheese, chopped.
1 cup milk.
1 cup uncooked macaroni.
1½ cups chopped, cooked ham.
4 hard-cooked eggs, sliced.

Make white sauce of butter, flour, salt and milk. Add cheese to it and stir until cheese is melted. Put 1 cup cooked macaroni in bottom of greased casserole, sprinkle with ¾ cup ham, cover with layer of egg slices and pour ½ of cheese sauce over top. Repeat, arranging remaining ingredients in layers; cover with buttered crumbs. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about one-half hour. Approximate yield: 6 portions.

With the State Societies

Attention, History-Wise Tennesseans!

By Nicha Soure

DO YOU know to what Tennessean a public monument has been erected in the Panama Canal Zone?

Well, if you do, the Tennessee State Society's "Quiz Party to End All Quiz Parties" is the place for you. Take your chance at winning a real lifesize doll house or a weekend at a New York City hotel, all expenses paid, when the society sponsors a quiz party at 8:30 p. m. Saturday, May 28, at Hotel 2400.

There'll be other questions about Tennessee's geography, history, industry, art, literature, music, tradition and famous personalities, and to the lucky person who answers correctly will be given anything from a Tennessee ham to a fishing reel, plus a weekend at a Tennessee lake with guide and hotel expenses taken care of.

If you can't get away for the Memorial Day weekend, don't fret; get out your old Tennessee history book and bone up on the lore of the Volunteer State. Maybe your weekend away from the Capital in the near future will be with the compliments of the Tennessee State Society.

AAUW Hears British Labor Setup Lauded

The time lost in Great Britain during the last three years owing to industrial disputes has amounted to only 1/25 of what it was in a corresponding period following the first World War, Archibald McDonald Gordon said yesterday.

Mr. Gordon, labor attache and counselor to the British Embassy, was the guest speaker at last night's dinner of the legislative group of the Washington Branch, American Association of University Women.

One of the most useful features of the British administrative machinery, in Mr. Gordon's opinion, is the National Joint Industrial Council made up of representatives of employers and workers presided over by the Minister of Labor and National Service.

This council meets regularly and enables the government and industry to keep informed about all aspects of matters affecting industry.

According to Mr. Gordon, the information includes the economic position of the country in respect of employment, state of trade, national income and balance of foreign payments.

"The industrial relations system which has developed in Britain," he said, "is based on indipendent self-government and provisions of voluntary agreements between the two sides. It is undoubtedly one of the main factors which made possible the total mobilization of the country and its tremendous production achievements in the recent war."

It was also a contributing factor to the relatively smooth transition from war to peacetime conditions, he continued, and is again proving its value in the greater productivity effort which the country is making to achieve economic recovery.

Mrs. Johnson Visits

Mrs. Alexander L. Johnson, of Leesburg, Fla., has been visiting her cousin, Mme. Rimensberger, wife of the Attache of the Swiss Legation. Early in June Mrs. Johnson will sail for Europe to visit Switzerland, Holland, England and France, and will return to this country the middle of September.

DRUM POINT BEACH

Beats Anything You've Ever Seen

Now that's a strong statement; but let's review some of the many features of DRUM POINT BEACH. Miles and miles of white sandy beaches that offer the finest bathing and swimming facilities on the Bay. The Patuxent River, famous for fishing, boasting some of the most abundant waters in the East and offering points of interest to every sportsman. Between these two great bodies of water—the Chesapeake Bay and the Patuxent River, which runs into the Bay—lie some of the choicest lots and cottage sites ever developed, beautifully wooded, generously proportioned, offering the kind of living discriminating and ambitious people dream of, yet surprisingly low priced. And let's not forget those lovely fresh-water lakes that are dispersed like gems in the midst of this land of enchantment. Yet all these features are just starters—there are so many wonderful things about DRUM POINT BEACH you'll be discovering them for many a day. We have just opened a new cottage section, where good-sized lots are now available for as low as $295 (70'x145'). Can you imagine that? A large cottage site at Washington's largest and most spectacular beach for as little as $295! No wonder more families are choosing DRUM POINT BEACH as their summer home and vacation land. You will, too, once you see it. How about coming out—this very weekend? Within easy commuting distance from Washington. Directions are simple: Out Bladensburg rd. to Peace Cross, bear right on Landover rd. (Route 202), through Largo and Upper Marlboro to Wells Corner (on Route 4), right on 416 through Prince Frederick (on Route 2) for 15 miles, left at the DRUM POINT BEACH sign. Also, you can write or phone for free, descriptive booklet! DRUM POINT CORPORATION, owners-developers. Calvert Realty Agency, 320 Southern Building. REpublic 9436.

They came—they saw—they were delighted! Who? The future residents of Saunders Point Beach, of course.

We want you to do the same. We're mighty proud of this relaxing, healthful, year-round playground where you can completely relax in the invigorating salt air after a hard grind in the city.

There's safe swimming, sun bathing, boating, fishing in the finest fishing grounds of the broad Chesapeake, opposite Thomas and Bloody Point lighthouses, where fish and fishermen ply their way past your front door out to the seven seas. The family may stay here from early spring till fall while the husband goes to business in the city, during the week, and doubly enjoys his close, economical restful escape over the week-end. Jobless Pay Declines in April

The average weekly list of beneficiaries was 1,605,000, down 183,000 from March.

Robert C. Goodwin, bureau director, said in a weekly report, however, that claimants for unemployment insurance appeared to be remaining unemployed longer than at this time a year ago.

Benefits paid to unemployed workers covered by State unemployment insurance laws in April totaled $136,552,000, a decline of $15,652,000 from March payments.

Godfrey Drives a Hard Bargain; Terms of Deal Revealed

I'm not supposed to know about this story—but I'm going to tell it anyhow.

Arthur Godfrey accepted with alacrity when he was invited to appear in The Washington Post's National Celebrities Golf Tournament, to be held at the Army-Navy Country Club, June 4 and 5.

And he was also quick to say "yes" when Sports Editor Bus Ham suggested that Arthur headline a big variety show at the Armory on the night of the 4th.

"Sure," said Godfrey. "I know that the profits of both the show and the tournament are spent on the kids—to help fight juvenile delinquency. That's for me. And what's more, I'll bring along some of the best talent in the country."

"Great," said Bus. "Now, about money—I guess you know that nobody gets paid in this deal. However, if you're bringing in a lot of entertainers, that'll help sell more tickets—so we could use part of the gross proceeds to pay their traveling expenses."

"Nothing doing," countered Godfrey. "Washington has been mighty good to me, and I'd like to see every penny that comes in used for the kids. So this one is going to be on Arthur. I'll pick up the tab for the whole gang."

That's the deal he insisted on, and that's the way it's going to be.

I hate to write anything nice about a lug whose expanding radio program is shoving me off the air. But what can you do with a guy like Godfrey?

THERE SEEMS TO BE A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

During the past few years, I've called Interior Department officials dozens of times to try to get information about Golf Concessioner Leoffler's books.

Each time I was assured that the concessioner kept detailed records which in all ways measured up to the Department's specifications.

Among those who gave me these assurances were Assistant Secretary of Interior C. Girard Davidson, National Capital Parks Superintendent Irving C. Root, and Chief of Concessions Oliver G. Taylor.

But the auditors who have just completed an examination of Leoffler's accounts for a Congressional subcommittee say that the books are the worst they've ever seen. Lump sum expenditures have been listed without any attempt to tell exactly where the money went, and several large items have been challenged by the investigators.

Under the circumstances, this would appear to be an appropriate moment for Interior's top brass to reaffirm their faith in Mr. Leoffler's bookkeeping system.

Any comment, gentlemen of Interior?

BARD REVISITED

Patty Guion of 4201 N. 4th st., Arlington, Va., is unimpressed with Lawyer Archibald Palmer's quotations from Shakespeare.

Judith Coplon's attorney was quoted recently as telling the court:

"Shakespeare said when you steal my name you steal trash. Shakespeare was wrong. Judith Coplon's reputation has been assassinated."

Observes Patty: "That ain't the way I heard it. I thought Shakespeare said: 'Who steals my purse steals trash.' Right?"

RADIO CABS

Here we go again, with the story of the woman whose call for a radio cab was answered by a hacker who happened to be passing her house.

Floyd Montgomery, at Yellow Cab, tells me that it's no gag. Two women called from Gallinger, then refused to ride with the man who was waiting for them when they walked outside—because "this couldn't have been your call; you couldn't have gotten here so fast."

In more serious vein, there was a call from an address on Isherwood st. ne. one day. A child had been injured in an accident, and she had to be gotten to the hospital as quickly as possible.

Again, a cab happened to be passing the address when the call was received. Floyd reports that 210 seconds after the call came in, the child was in Providence Hospital. She was "out of danger" a few hours later.

DOUBLE TROUBLE

Unless some Congressman takes an interest in their plight, the 17-year-old McGregor twins, Rob Roy and Thomas, of 3732 Holmes lane, Alexandria, Va., will soon be parted for the first time.

Both boys took the Presidential Entrance Examination for West Point last March, and both did very well. Rob Roy placed 13th and Tom 28th, in a group of more than 400.

However only ten appointments were available to that group, and Rob Roy squeezed through only because three candidates ahead of him were disqualified.

TOM ROB ROY

So now Rob Roy is scheduled to enter West Point in July—and Tom will have to remain at home.

Unless, of course, some understanding Congressman has a spare appointment that isn't needed elsewhere.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I've heard many people say that they'd like to send some food overseas, but inasmuch as they can't afford a $10 CARE package, they send nothing.

Would you like to suggest to CARE that they put out a smaller package, to meet such situations?

Mrs. William J. Barry
1928 Belmont rd. nw.

Dear Mrs. Barry:

The local CARE office says it's an idea, and they'll look into the possibility of working out a smaller package.

Meantime they constantly get donations in odd amounts, and combine them into proper sums to pay for food parcels.

In addition, many contributions arrive anonymously. Therefore a person who can afford only $5 will probably have his money combined with the gift of an anonymous $5 donor, with the package going in the name of the person who identified himself.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Fight Riddles Resources Board

By Drew Pearson

It was Mrs. Mon Wallgren, wife of the likable, buffeted former Governor of Washington, who finally caused President Truman to withdraw her husband's name as chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

PEARSON

Once before Wallgren had offered to drop out of the battle for Senate confirmation, but Truman wouldn't hear of it. The Senate's rejection was taken as a personal slap at Truman and he asked his old Senate buddy to stick it out.

This week, however, Mrs. Wallgren told her husband she couldn't take it any longer, pleaded with him to categorically withdraw. It was only then that Truman agreed.

Wallgren, an A-1 Senator, is fed up with Washington, D. C., has several private job offers, wants to see no more of Government.

But the tragic fact remains that Missouri-mule stubbornness in the White House has bogged down one of the most vital bureaus of Government. The National Security Resources Board, created to plan the economy of the Nation in case of emergency, and potentially the most powerful agency in Washington, has been headless, its morale dropped to zero, with resignations epidemic, and leaderless personnel at each other's throats.

What goes on inside the board is top secret, but certainly the public is at least entitled to know whether it is functioning smoothly. Despite this, officials are using the cloak of secrecy to hide what the board isn't doing instead of what it is doing.

When this column inquired how many times the board had met since Wallgren's appointment, Press Chief Charlie Schwarz sadly replied that this was classified information. He couldn't produce a directive showing it was classified, but the secretariat, H. DeWayne Kreager, had told him so. Later Schwarz called to say that he had found the minutes of the board, agreeing not to tell what went on at the meetings. He interpreted this to mean that the number of meetings should also be kept secret.

Real truth is, the board hasn't met at all since the Wallgren fight began. This was revealed by a less cautious board official, who quickly added that the board "probably" meets "informally" after Cabinet meetings.

The board has been given some direction by Presidential Assistant John Steelman, the pinch-hitting, part-time chairman. But Steelman already had his hands full before he took on this extra burden.

Meanwhile, other key men have been dropping out like Indians biting the dust—Vice Chairman R. E. Gilmore, who went back to Sperry Gyroscope; General Counsel Kenneth D. Johnson, who took a job as a dean at Columbia University; Director of Production George Felton, who returned to his leather factories in New England, and Director of Economic Management E. T. Grether, who returned to the University of California.

The board also is looking for replacements for more than 30 lesser lights who became discouraged and quit. Those remaining are feuding over policy or brooding over lack of work. One fight is over the establishment of a board of experts on industrial production information. Suggested by Economics Director Glenn McLaughlin, this was opposed by others who claim they can find the production answers without high-powered help.

Note—Truman fought with every political trick in the book to get Wallgren confirmed. He wheedled, threatened, even offered job bribes to Senators who voted against Wallgren. Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia received a visit from Democratic National Chairman McGrath, who slyly inquired what it would take to change Byrd's vote. Republican Senator Morse of Oregon, who voted against Wallgren, also got an offer to become United States Circuit Court judge on the West Coast; while Senator Baldwin of Connecticut, another anti-Wallgren Republican, accepted a Supreme Court judgeship in his State, though Baldwin had long-cherished personal reasons for going on the bench.

Supreme Court Dog

At the Supreme Court this week, Ernest A. Cole, who worked his way up from watchman to lieutenant of the guard, was given a gold badge and retired to private life.

Most people who honored Cole, including the Supreme Court justices, did not know that in addition to his faithful service, he had another distinction. When the cornerstone of the new Supreme Court building was laid, it contained a copy of the Declaration of Independence, famous addresses of famous justices, a photograph of William Howard Taft, who had planned the building, a copy of the Constitution, and finally a picture of another Supreme Court fixture, not as famous as Chief Justice Taft, but just as beloved by some.

Without the frock-coated justices knowing it, and as deftly as John Marshall once inserted his Marbury vs. Madison wedge into the Constitution, thereby giving the court the right to rule on acts of Congress, watchman Cole had slipped this photograph into the steel box of the cornerstone.

It was a picture of Fanny, the Supreme Court collie bitch, giving suck to her seven pups. The learned justices did not know Fanny, but the watchmen loved her. She had come from nowhere, but she was their dog, and this was her big day.
